PREFACE.

IT would seem, as far as present knowledge has advanced, that the work now printed at length was first brought to light from among the Royal Manuscripts of the British Museum by Mr. Edmund Bishop. It was edited in part by him in two or three Appendices to a volume brought out in 1890, bearing the title of Edward the Sixth and the Book of Common Prayer, with Cardinal Gasquet and Mr. Bishop as authors. The book passed into a second edition, little if at all altered, in 1891. With the consent of these two eminent scholars, the whole of the manuscript is now printed, and the only reason that can be given for so venturesome a step on my part is that a very large portion of the manuscript, such as the calendars, hymns, collects, legends of the saints, and other liturgical matter, has not as yet been completely made known.

Of the importance of all this manuscript for the history of the change of rite in England there can be no question ; and it does not seem unsuitable that a Society like the Henry Bradshaw Society, founded to edit by preference works which bear upon the history of the Book of Common Prayer, should undertake the task of furnishing to its members an unabridged edition of a manuscript which throws such light upon the first steps taken in framing the Mattins and Evensong that are to this day still in use in the Church of England.

To Mr. J. A. Herbert I am under very great obligations for the transcription of the manuscript, and for much assistance throughout the time that this edition has been in hand. Also to Mr. Henry Littlehales for repeated collations of the proofs with the manuscript ; and my conscience accuses me of a fault in undertaking the editing of this manuscript at such a distance from its home: in extenuation, I can only plead that the work was begun some time before I left London, and that at a moment when I did not foresee the change that was to happen in my place of abode. After Mr. Littlehales left London, I have been indebted to the Treasurer for his kindness in settling some points in the proofs where I doubted their accuracy. The Secretary has again given me much help by his criticism on the Introduction and Notes.

But besides the help which is always given me so freely by the Treasurer and Secretary of the Society, I am indebted to the Rev. Dr. B. J. Kidd, Honorary Canon of Christ Church, Oxford; Mr. T. Gambier-Parry, of the Bodleian Library; Mr. L. H. E. Taylor, Mr. J. V. Scholderer, and Mr. D. T. Baird Wood, of the British Museum, for advice and assistance; for which I now offer them these imperfect thanks. Mr. R. A. Abrams, also of the Bodleian, has prepared the Liturgical Index.

INTRODUCTION.

DESCRIPTION OF THE MANUSCRIPT.

THE Manuscript, Royal 7. B. IV. in the British Museum, consists of 159 leaves of paper, in folio, measuring 300 millimetres by 200, or twelve inches by eight. The present binding appears to date from the entrance of the book into the Museum ; it is of brown calf, with M. B. in large Roman capitals on the side. It is lettered at the back : Festivale et Hor. Canonic. Series. Codex seculi XVI. Mus. Brit. Bibl. Reg. 7. B. IV. [illegible] i. 22. Plut. VIII. C.

There are two fly-leaves of vellum, binders' waste, at the beginning and end of the volume. The yet unpublished Catalogue of the British Museum states that they are from a commentary on the Decretals of Gregory IX., in a late thirteenth century hand, containing lib. i. tit. iii. cap. 14-38. Also, according to the same authority, there is written in a late sixteenth century hand, on the verso of fo. 3: Festivale et horarum canonicarum series.

The portion of the manuscript which in the pages below is called Part the Second is thought, according to the British Museum Catalogue, not yet published, to be earlier than Part the First, and to have been probably written between 1543 and 1547. Part the First, it is said, may be later than the death of Henry VIII. in January, 1547. The Calendar at the end of the manuscript may be intermediate. Following the suggestion of Gasquet and Bishop,¹ the Catalogue confirms the idea that one or more of these drafts were probably among the books asked for by Convocation in November, 1547.

Mr. J. A. Herbert, of the Department of Manuscripts in the British Museum, to whom the Society owes the transcription of the manuscript, has also been so good as to add the following notes, dated 16 August, 1912.

I have done my best to make a thorough examination of the hands in Royal 7 B. iv., but I do not see anything that I can say, worth saying, after the pronouncements of Gasquet and Bishop (Edward VI. and the Book of Common Prayer, 1890, p. 312) and of the authors of the new (not yet published) Catalogue of the Royal MSS. But I will just state their conclusions briefly, with any few comments of my own that seem worth making.

1. ff. 4–6b. The body is a formal hand (say Hand A): the additions, though not all written at the same time (some being in a much paler ink than others), appear to be all in Cranmer's hand. [Gasquet and Bishop and the Catalogue assert positively that the additions are by Cranmer. And I see no reason for dissenting.]

2. ff. 7–47. In another formal hand (call it Hand B). I am not certain that it is not the same as A, but I certainly could not venture to say that it is. Gasquet and Bishop call ff. 7–21 one hand, and say it "seems to be the same" as ff. 22–47, but I agree with the Catalogue in asserting confidently that the hand of ff. 7–21 is the same as that of ff. 22–47). Additions by Cranmer. [So Gasquet and Bishop, and Catalogue; I see no reason for dissenting.]

3. ff. 50–132b. In a good clear regular hand (C), asserted by the Catalogue to be that of Ralph Morice, Cranmer's secretary. [for whom see Dictionary of National Biography.]

[It is certainly the same hand as Harley MS. 426. (De summa Trinitate et fide catholica, etc., preceded by table of contents in Cranmer's hand), to which the Catalogue refers. I don't know on what grounds Harl. 426 is assigned to Morice, but have every reason for believing them to be solid.] Both Gasquet and Bishop and the Catalogue speak of additions by Cranmer; but the only additions I have seen in this part seem to be in Hand C.

4. ff. 133–150. Evidently in Hand C. [Gasquet and Bishop say "seems to be," but I think with the Catalogue that one may safely go further.] Additions by Cranmer. [So Gasquet and Bishop, and the Catalogue; I see no reason for dissenting.]

5. ff. 151–156. Entirely in Cranmer's own hand. [So Gasquet and Bishop and the Catalogue; I see no reason for dissenting.]

6. ff. 157–159b. In a formal hand (D) which Gasquet and Bishop say probably is A. But the Catalogue [prudently, as I hold] says that this identification "seems very doubtful."

It may be taken for a rule that where in the notes it is said that changes have been made in a different hand, the hand is that commonly looked upon as Cranmer's. So also the whole of the Table of Lessons from fo. 151 to fo. 156 that follows Part the Second is thought to be in Cranmer's own hand. But if this connexion with Cranmer be doubted, the formal hand that wrote from fo. 50 to fo. 132b is, in the opinion of the most expert palæographers, that of Ralph Morice, Cranmer's faithful servant and secretary.

At Cranmer's attainder his books were sold, and a large portion of them passed into the possession of Lord Lumley, whose name appears on the lower margin of fo. 1 of the manuscript. From him many of Cranmer's books passed into the library of Henry, Prince of Wales, the eldest son of King James the First, and formed part of the Royal Library, which on the foundation of the British Museum became, by the gift of King George the Second, the property of the Trustees.

An examination of the water-marks in the paper was made, but little was gained by this in deciding the difference in age of the two Parts. A medley of water-marks runs through both Parts. Sometimes there is a flagon, sometimes a glove with a star over the middle finger, sometimes a smaller glove. According to Monsieur Briquet these water-marks may be assigned to the fourth decade of the sixteenth century¹; but the means for forming a more precise conclusion do not at present seem to exist. I have also availed myself of the large collection of tracings of water-marks made by Mr. Beazley from the papers of the Chapter Library at Canterbury; but without being able to throw further light upon the date of our manuscript. They are in the British Museum, Add. MSS. 38,637-8, with explanatory notes in MSS. 38,639-38,642.

THE COMING OF THE CHANGE OF RITE IN 1549.

It is a commonplace of the liturgical student that the essence of the Divine Service consists in the recitation of the psalms, with readings of lessons from holy Scripture. In most of the mediæval rites the psalms are recited, or should be recited, once a week, and the lessons are supposed to be so distributed that the whole Bible may be read through once a year. There can be but little doubt that some such idea as this was present to the mind of Cranmer when he drew up the papers which are now edited for the Henry Bradshaw Society. In Cranmer's time the Roman and the local Breviaries, like that of Sarum, had departed largely from this ideal, and yet it is possible to detect the original scheme in the books of the period, whether written or printed, containing the Divine Service; though hardly to be found in the daily practice of the clergy, for the overfilling of the Calendar with festivals had caused the weekly recitation of the whole psalter to cease, and the lessons from the Bible to be replaced by the legends of the saints.

Thus a very grave departure from the original purpose of the Divine Service had been brought into the Western Church. And after this abuse had been endured for some centuries, a cry arose for a revision of the Breviary, even before the Lutheran Reformation in Germany. This was needed more than a revision of the Missal. The Renaissance caused great dissatisfaction with the Latin of the Breviary : and as to the literary value of its parts, Erasmus complained of the historical inaccuracy of the Legends of the Saints ; and an Archbishop of Mentz compared them to old wives' fables.¹ Local attempts at reform were made at Sens, Bourges, and Soissons in the third decade of the sixteenth century, and at last a definite revision was achieved, which received the approval of more than one Roman Pontiff. In 1535 was published the first recension of the Breviary of Cardinal Quignon.² The second recension appeared in 1536. Edition after edition came out until more than a hundred had been issued before the final suppression of this breviary by the reform of Pius V. in 1568. Such popularity is some evidence of the need felt in the West for a reform of the Divine Service.

Some such ideas as to the nature of the Divine Service must have been in Cranmer's mind as well as in those of the adherents of the Papal Court. If the Sarum Breviary had continued in use in England, it could not have been retained without searching reform, such as that which the Roman Breviary underwent at the hands of Pius V. Indeed, the revision might very profitably have gone further, further even than the lines of Cranmer's scheme printed below, which may be called Part the Second ; it might have followed the plan shown in Cardinal Tommasi's suggestions, which were reprinted³ some few years ago by the Church Historical Society.

To return to the unrevised Sarum. If we take up this Breviary for a short examination it will be perceived at once that not only a translation of this service book had become necessary in the sixteenth century if worship were to be in the vernacular, but a thorough revision of all its contents was imperative. The calendar, it may be thought, called aloud for a complete rearrangement : if we look at the Calendar of the Cambridge reprint⁴ there is hardly a day that is not taken up by a saint, with what disturbance of the Psalter may be imagined when it is remembered that each saint's day had proper psalms, and that these proper psalms were nearly the same for every saint or festival. Thus if any return had to be made to the recitation of the whole psalter it was plain that either the Calendar must be cleared of all but the chiefest saints, and the Common abolished, or a redistribution of the Psalter be made. In the reform of Pius X. this latter procedure was chosen, but some Continental critics of this reform have held that it was the Calendar with which his advisers should have begun, leaving the old Gregorian Psalter, of immense antiquity, untouched, but with no proper psalms save for the highest feasts.

⁴ Breviarium . . . Sarum, ed. F. Procter and C. Wordsworth, Cambridge, 1882, in three fasciculi.

Thus Cranmer was but returning to the practice of antiquity in devising some reform whereby the whole of the Psalter should again be recited in the Divine Service. Not less was the need of reform in the lessons, if the whole of the Bible were to be read once in the year. If we take up the Temporale of the Sarum Breviary and look at the amount of Scripture reading that is contained in the lessons, it will be a surprise to many of us to see how little Scripture was read. In theory Isaiah was read during Advent. In practice, some two or three verses were read in each Scripture lesson during Advent, so that by Christmas Eve they had only reached the fourteenth chapter of that prophet. During certain seasons no Scripture was read at all, as from Christmas Day to Twelfth-night Eve, and during the Octaves of Easter and the Octaves of Pentecost. In certain breviaries on the Continent no Scripture was read during Lent on weekdays, and the Roman Breviary, even in the Reform of Leo XIII.¹ continues to be a great offender in this respect.

This great defect, the absence of the public reading of Scripture in the Divine Service, must have been perceived in the reign of Henry VIII. In England it was understood that even if there were to be no extinction of the Sarum Breviary, such as took place soon after the death of Henry VIII., still a considerable change was to be looked for. Thus certain resolutions appear to have been passed in the Convocation that sat between March 28th and April 3rd, 1541, from which the following extract has been taken :

It was ordered also, that every Sunday and holy day throughout the year, the curate of every parish church after the Te Deum, and Magnificat, should openly read unto the people one chapter of the New Testament in English, without exposition ; and when the New Testament was read over, then to begin the Old.²

² Convocation of Canterbury, March 29, 1541. D. Wilkins, Concilia, Lond. 1737. t. iii. p. 863.

And further. There are certain ecclesiastical laws framed by the authority of Edward VI. which direct the reading of lessons from Scripture in the common tongue.

The gospel and epistle to be red in the heringe of the people. [in m.]

Also in the time of high masse with in euery church he that saith or si[n]geth the same shall rede or cause to be redde the Epistle and Gospell of that masse in Englishe and not in laten in the pulpit or in such conuenient place as the people may here the same. And also euery sonday and hollyday, they shal plainley and distinctly reede or cause to be red one chapter of the new testament in englishe, in the saide place at mattens, imediately after the lessons, and at euensonge, after magnificat, one chapter of the olde testament.¹

Unless we hold firmly to the opinion that nothing, hardly a comma, can be changed in the Divine Service, inconsultis Pontificibus,² Cranmer's changes would not seem so unjustifiable in altering the distribution of the Psalms; or even in adopting the version of Erasmus for Scripture, as a little later on we shall see was done in the Quartae Lectiones of Part the First. But then there is the radical difference that the changes made by the Humiliates of Milan, like as they were to the changes made by Cranmer, were made by the authority of the reigning Pontiff, Paul III., and thus they could be altogether free from blame in the eyes of the stricter canonists.

On making a little study of these papers of Cranmer, they will be found to fall quite naturally into two portions. The leaves which are now bound up in the first part of the manuscript, from leaf 4 to leaf 132, and which may be called Part the First, were written under an inspiration which eventually led to the Mattins and Evensong of the I. of Edward VI. and so later on to the same services in the present Book of Common Prayer, now in use. The leaves from 133 to 156, near the end of the manuscript, which may be called Part the Second, were conceived under the influence of the Breviary of Cardinal Quignon, and did not lead to any practical result that we know. The Calendar at the very end from leaf 157 to 165 may not belong to either Part, but if it have any connexion with the other parts of the manuscript, such connexion will be more with Part the First than with Part the Second.

THE MANUSCRIPT AS A WHOLE.

It may be well to begin this attempt at describing in detail

² D. Bouix, Tractatus de Iure liturgico, Arras, 1860, 2^e ed. Pars IV. cap. iv. prop. vi. p. 268.

these projects of Cranmer's by a view in broad outline of these two Parts. It has just been said that Part the First is allied to the Mattins and Evensong of I. of Edward VI., while Part the Second is allied to the Breviary of Cardinal Quignon. Thus the conception determining the plan of Part the First differs considerably from that determining the plan of Part the Second, and it would seem to follow that Part the Second was most likely devised before Part the First, though Part the Second is placed after Part the First in the manuscript. For it would seem natural to think that these pieces follow the course of Cranmer's mind, and that they pass from that more elaborate, like Quignon, to that of the simpler, as the Prayer Book Mattins and Evensong. But Cranmer's vacillation has to be reckoned with. He may have returned to earlier thoughts after having drawn up what may seem to us to be the later. For example: The stanzas in veneration of the Cross in Vexilla Regis are retained in the First Part but have disappeared from the Second; and the Invention of the Cross appears on May 3 in the Calendar of Part the First while it is absent in the Calendarium Secundum that follows Part the Second and is supposed to be intermediate between the First and Second Parts. In 1546 Cranmer tried to persuade Henry VIII. by his own royal authority to put down all marks of veneration of the Cross in the Service books, but his advice was not acted upon.¹ Thus if Cranmer had been at all consistent in developing his opinions, Part the First would have been put together before 1546.

And to show that in a reform the simpler forms are not always the later, there are the two recensions of Q. The first text has no anthems; but the second text returns to anthems; and the lessons, which were almost entirely of Holy Scripture in the first text, are borrowed abundantly from the passages of the Fathers to be found in the Old Roman Breviary of 1534. The changes made are nearly all a going back to mediæval practice. Nevertheless, as between the two Parts, there will very likely be a preponderance of opinion that the composition of Part the Second preceded Part the First; so it may be well to take Part the Second before Part the First; though there is no exact proof which came into existence before the other.

THE STRUCTURE OF THE SECOND PART.

The Hours of Prayer in Part the Second are given in the full mediæval number of seven, counting Mattins and Lauds as one.

¹ Henry Jenkyns, The Remains of Thomas Cranmer, Oxford University Press, 1833, vol. i. p. 319.

CRANMER.

They contain those last added to the series, Prime and Complin ; and they have as well the Hours said at nine o'clock, noon, and three, together with the primitive Hours of Mattins and Vespers. Each Hour in Part the Second is arranged on the scheme of Q : Deus in adiutorium, a hymn, three psalms, and a collect.

The Hours are preceded in every case by the Lord's Prayer, as in Q¹ without Ave Maria or Credo : though Ave Maria is said in Q² and Ave Maria and Credo in S. before Mattins.

Mattins differs from the other hours in several ways. It has Domine labia said before Deus in adiutorium, and Venite is interposed before the hymn and the psalms. But this is common to Q and the mediæval breviaries generally. Also there are four lessons said after the psalms before Te Deum, for which in Septuagesima and Advent is substituted Miserere, our psalm li.

Lauds has no hymn, following the precedent of Q, and it may possibly have had its third psalm, if here Cranmer followed Q, supplied by the Canticle from the mediæval breviary. A portion of the sapiential books is read before Benedictus, and apparently the anthem to Lauds is said after Benedictus and the reading of this sapiential portion. The collect of the day is then said. After the collect of the day follow preces with the collect commonly said at Prime. This is an unusual transposition. The collect of the day should have been said after preces, and the collect for Prime at Prime, if Sarum precedent had been followed.

It may be noticed that the preces are precisely those said in I of Edward VI. and, to this day, in the Book of Common Prayer, with a verse and respond added: O God make clean our hearts, etc.

None is made to differ curiously from the other Hours in its ending. It has the hymn and three psalms, as at Terce and Sext, but preces follow the psalms, as at Lauds, and a collect, pro iter agentibus from the Sarum Missal, ends the office.

It seems as if the compiler had in his mind the institution of three groups of Hours, most likely to be said together : Mattins, Lauds, and Prime, as one group ; Terce, Sext, and None, another ; and finally Vespers and Complin. Thus, in practice, the number of times in a day for which men met for prayer would be reduced to three, instead of seven.

Vespers shows at first a strict adherence to the Quignonian type : hymn, anthem, then psalms and Magnificat, anthem repeated ; but after the anthem comes a lesson from the same book as at Mattins, followed by the collect of the day. In Q there is no lesson at Vespers. In the Second Part no such interpolation of the lesson comes between the psalms and canticle at Vespers as there is at Lauds (p. 116, l. 9). Ancient precedent would demand that nothing like a lesson should be thrust between the first recitation of the anthem and its repetition at the close of the liturgical group of psalms and canticle.

At Compline there is again the Quignonian order, except that preces are said at the end. Cranmer has shown a good judgement in not following Q, who rejects preces at almost every hour; he has re-introduced them at four, Lauds, Prime, None, and Compline. Apparently he intended to signify by the preces the termination of the group of Hours to which attention has been invited above. This, however, does not hold good of the group of Mattins, Lauds, and Prime, where preces are said at the end of Lauds, and of Prime. Or was it that Cranmer designed that Prime should be said by itself?

THE QUIGNONIAN SOURCES OF THE SECOND PART.

In reckoning up the sources from which Cranmer derived his ideas of reform, it can hardly any longer be denied¹ that he borrowed from Q² almost to a greater extent than from Q¹. Convincing evidence of his knowledge of Q² may be found in the prefatory matter, which is now printed below in the Appendix, in quadruple columns. In the prefatory matter, for example, the paragraph beginning Nihil unquam on p. 169, l. 40, below, has its equivalent in Q² but not in Q¹. Anthems were wholly omitted from Q¹, but they are to be found in Part the Second, with some that are peculiar to Q²: it may not unreasonably be inferred that Cranmer derived them from Q². Making some comparison of the Ash Wednesday anthems in Part the Second with those in Q²: on p. 124, l. 33, Derelinquet is the same, and on l. 24, Cranmer follows verbally the anthem Convertimini in Q², but not that of S. The lesson Magnus enim is plainly suggested by Q² but not by Q¹. Then on p. 126, l. 5, at Passion Sunday, Cranmer has quia with Q² while Q¹ has qui: the anthem at Mattins is Circumdederunt, as Q², while there is no such anthem in S. The third lesson on Maundy Thursday (p. 130, l. 5), Convenientibus, is taken from Q². This is not the lesson in Q¹. Posuerunt is Cranmer's anthem for Mattins of Easter Even, as in Q², but not in S.

While the anthems of the Second Part are often borrowed from Q², another suggestive appearance may be noticed in the three Hours which have Benedictus, Magnificat, and Nunc Dimittis imbedded in their framework. In the Sarum use these canticles formed a separate part of the Hour, appearing after the psalms had been said, and they were divided from them by a little chapter and hymn, while the psalms had their own anthems different from that of the canticle. In Q² the psalms and canticle are said continuously together under one anthem, and either no hymn, as at Lauds, is said, or the hymn is said, as at Vespers and Complin, before the psalms. The same arrangement is followed in the Hours of the Second Part, the anthem being said at the beginning of the psalms and after the Canticle, and the hymn at the beginning of the Hour.

This Second Part is spoken of in a chapter of Edward VI. and the Book of Common Prayer. From internal evidence I feel inclined to ascribe the paragraph to Cardinal Gasquet :

The choice of Quignon's work for a model has an aspect almost eirencical. At the time it must have seemed more than probable that the Quignon breviary would before very long become the recognized office book of the Roman church. Its ready and general acceptance on this side of the Alps gave promise that it would become the common breviary of the West. To take the Quignon text therefore showed some disposition, so far from widening the breach caused in England by the separation from Rome, to keep to points of contact with the Western church as far as possible.¹

Therefore it is concluded that this scheme was not Cranmer's, but Tunstall's. But such a change of tactics seems quite consonant with the vacillation habitual in Cranmer's mind.

THE STRUCTURE OF PART THE FIRST.

Next to make an attempt at drawing an outline of the structure of the First Part. It may show the difference in the ideas which dominate the two sections of the manuscript if it be pointed out that in the Second Part there are retained the eight or seven mediæval Hours of prayer, of which mention has just been made; but that in the First Part there are only two Hours, Mattins and Evensong. Cranmer notes on p. 22, l. 14, the omission of Complin, Prime, Terce, Sext, and None. Instead of saying these Hours separately, at different times of the day, men were used to come together for prayer only twice a day. It may, indeed, be readily allowed to Cranmer to complain of the great resemblance of Terce, Sext, and None, which renders these mediæval offices wearisome. Monseigneur Batiffol recognizes this when he says :

The incessant daily use of Psalm cxviii. [Beati immaculati, ps. cxix.] was a grave imperfection in the breviary, especially when we consider how little variety there is in the matter contained in this psalm, and the monotonous character of its literary form.¹

It may be remembered, however, that it was only in the breviaries based on the Gregorian Psalter, that the day Hours have this incessant repetition of Beati immaculati. In Q the psalms varied daily. There were different psalms also in the Benedictine distribution for the little Hours. If in Part the Second Cranmer used the Quignonian distribution he could not have justly complained of the little Hours in the language which he has employed on ll. 17 and 18 of p. 22. This may be another instance of the vacillation and inconsistency which distinguish Cranmer's behaviour; or, it may suggest that Cranmer passed from Sarum direct to the First Part, and that he wrote Part the Second after Part the First.

Further : anthems, responds, invitatories, and little chapters were removed, in accordance with the preface.² The removal of these by Quignon, except the invitatories, was considered by a contemporary of Quignon, Doctor Navarrus,³ one of the more excellent parts of his reform. The mind is no longer drawn away from prayer by the search for these chapters and responds. But the greatest support given to Cranmer's removal of anthems, responds, and such like, was that afforded by the Blessed Cardinal Tommasi, "the Prince and Doctor of Liturgy in the Western Church," who removed anthems and responds from his scheme for the Divine Service. Benedict the Fourteenth, the most learned of modern Popes, was likewise in favour of the discontinuance of anthems to the psalms and canticles ; so also Galliccioli, the editor of St. Gregory the Great, and Binterim, who says of anthems and responds that they are "eine sinnlose Battologie."⁴ So that Cranmer, in removing anthems from the psalms and canticles, had great authorities to support him in the future. The Lutherans, curiously enough, as we shall see below, almost insisted on the retention of anthems and responds in their Orders.

The whole psalter was to be said, according to the First Part, twelve times in the year, and the Old Testament read once, and the Gospels, Epistles, and Acts of the Apostles, thrice, in the year. With some exceptions, three psalms were to be read at each Mattins and Evensong. There were to be five daily lessons: two from the Old and one from the New Testament, at morning service; two, one from the Old, another from the New, Testament, at evening service. These lessons were to be in the vernacular, and read from a pulpit outside the quire, not as the practice hitherto had been, within the quire. Such a change was not only a return to antiquity, but was an attempt made to promote the edification of the people by the better hearing of the lesson.

Mattins began with the Lord's Prayer in the vernacular, Domine labia mea, Alleluia, or Laus tibi from Septuagesima to Easter. A metrical hymn was next sung, Venite being omitted, then the three psalms, and the three lessons, followed by Te Deum and the Quarta lectio, if a Sunday or festival; Benedictus, and a collect. On Sundays Quicunque vult was next said, with preces, and the collect formerly said at Prime in S and Q.

Evensong followed closely the framework of Mattins, exchanging the three or four lessons for two, and Te Deum and Benedictus for Magnificat.

A considerable innovation may be noticed: that the Lord's Prayer at the beginning of the service and also before the three lessons was to be said in the vernacular. The lessons themselves were also to be in the mother tongue, even the quartae lectiones it would seem, though as they stand in the manuscript they are in Latin. The practice of reading lessons in the vernacular from Scripture in the divine service and during mass was not entirely new to the decade in which Cranmer was writing, for directions to read a portion of the Old and New Testament in the pulpit had been given in 1541.¹ Thus it is not necessary to invoke the direction in the Brunswick Agenda that the reader should stand outside before the altar to read the lessons,² as inspiring this rubric into Cranmer's mind.

A like curious practice of reading some part of the service in Latin and some in German will be noticed below when the early German Agenda come to be spoken of. Martin Luther taught that it was a good thing to have part of the service in Latin; indeed he would have had four tongues in use in worship: German, Latin, Greek, and Hebrew.³

THE SUPPOSED LUTHERAN SOURCES OF PART THE FIRST.

Whence did Cranmer draw his ideas in framing Part the First? Some will be sure to tell us that he had seen a similar formula in Germany, or in German books, or had heard of such; so that it may be desirable to see whether a possible source may be found in one or more of the numerous Kirchenordnungen published before the time at which it seems likely that Cranmer composed this Part, that is at latest before 1549. The large collection of such Kirchenordnungen which have been published by Dr. Emil Sehling since the present century began,¹ seems to afford a useful means of testing in this country the supposition that Cranmer drew his plans from the German Agenda, not forgetting Richter's similar but earlier collection, which is, however, not so full.² Most valuable, also, has been the fine collection of Lutheran Kirchenordnungen in the British Museum, as a supplement to the information given by Sehling and Richter.

That certain features must be common to Lutheran and English reforms will be granted if it be once allowed that the essence of Divine Service or Canonical Hours consists in the saying or singing of psalms and scripture hymns or canticles, followed by the reading of portions of Holy Scripture and the recitation of the Lord's Prayer. This is admitted by Lutheran Ritualists such as Löhe. He says: all the Roman Hours have four main constituents: Hymns (not necessarily metrical), Psalmody, Lessons, and Prayer. And a little further on he says that the Lutheran Mattins and Vespers have their roots in the Hours.³ So that if the principles on which Cranmer's First Part and the Lutheran Agenda are framed be the same, it is plain that the general structure will be much the same in both, and that differences will only arise in matters of detail.

In fact, in turning over these Agenda one cannot help noticing what a great part of the mediaeval system has survived. There is to be the Eucharist every Sunday provided there be communicants; and every Saturday evening Vespers, followed by the private confession of those who propose to communicate next morning. The order for their Eucharist, called a Mass (Messe) follows in many features the outline of the mediæval Roman mass¹: when there are no communicants, the mediæval missa sicca (Table prayers) is taken as a guide.

The elevation of the Sacrament during the Recital of the Institution was preserved in the early Agenda.² And in Löhe's suggestions made in the middle of the nineteenth century, he recommends the sign of the cross to be made in blessing and the custom of ringing a small bell (Betglocke) at the Vater unser at the end of Mattins and Vespers,³ clearly an imitation of the ringing at the Elevation. The chasuble and surplice were retained, also the two mediæval altar lights, even to the middle of the nineteenth century, if not longer. The Christian year from Advent to Trinity is still preserved in Germany.

Of the Divine Service, as understood in the Middle Ages, it will surprise many when they learn how much that was mediæval survived. Near or in Berlin, at a district known by the name of Cöln-an-der-Spree, there was a collegiate church founded by the Electors of Brandenburg, the breviary of which was printed in 1577 and is hardly to be distinguished from a mediæval breviary in its arrangement. It appears to have been edited at the command of John George, Elector of Brandenburg, by Andreas Musculus, his brother Paul, and George Coelestin.⁴ Copies are rare; one is in the Royal Library at Berlin, another in the Royal Library at Dresden, and there is also a copy in the British Museum, where its shelf mark is C. 52. e. 10. The title page is as follows :

Breviarii, Collegiatae Ecclesiae Coloniensis, in Marchia cis Sueuum, liberalitate & beneficentia Illustrissimorum principum Electorum Brandenburgicorum fundatae, & quasi per manus singulari pietate & industria, ad normam sanctae Apostolicae antiquitatis, ab omni Idolatria, superstitione & abusu, posteris traditæ, vindicatæ & repurgatæ Pars Prima, ¹ Cranmer has also called the Eucharistic office in the I. of Edward VI. a mass: "commonly called the Masse." But it has long been evident that an office to which the name of Mass can properly be given must be in Latin. No Liturgy in English, or German, or Slavonic, or Greek, can reasonably be called a mass. See also Dr. Adrian Fortescue: "It is only in the Roman (or Gallican) rite that the Eucharistic service can correctly be called Mass" (The Mass, a Study of the Roman Liturgy, Longmans, 1912, p. vii.).

² Gottesdienst-Ordnung der Stadt Coburg, 1524 (see Sehling, i. 542). Daniel has a long note on the retention by Luther of this, the chiefest and latest of the mediæval ceremonies (H. A. Daniel, Codex Liturgicus Ecclesiae Lutheranae, Lipsiae, Weigel, 1848, p. 87). How much that was mediæval still remains among the Lutherans may be understood from Daniel's work. It was the Reformed who thought evil of everything that they found in existence in the Church, not the Lutherans. Cf. C. W. Spieker, Lebensgeschichte des Andreas Musculus, Frankfurt-a.d.O. Trowitzsch, 1858, p. 24, on the Survival of the Mediæval Ceremonies.

Then there is the Allstedt book, for which we are indebted to Thomas Münzer. He was appointed parish priest of Allstedt in Weimar at Easter in 1523, and began a reform of the service books. That of the choir office is the one which at this moment most nearly concerns us. There are services for Mattins, Lauds, and Vespers, at church seasons like Advent, Christmas, Passion-tide, Easter, Whitsuntide. They are constructed exactly on the mediæval lines, and are hardly to be distinguished from those of the mediæval Primer by their framework.¹ According to the Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie this Ordnung became widely known ; but the career of Thomas Münzer does not seem to have been so edifying as his liturgical compositions.

Thus in the ordinary German Agenda one may often find a considerable resemblance to the Mattins and Vespers of the mediæval breviary. The three psalms and the three lessons of the German Agenda may be found in many parts of the old breviary, whence Quignon has plainly taken the usual plan of his offices. Thus if it be allowed that Cranmer was influenced by Q. certain resemblances between Cranmer and the Agenda may not unreasonably be looked for, as they both have a common source in the old Breviary. And a former Vice-President of our Society, Dr. Dowden, the late Bishop of Edinburgh, has warned us against elevating "similarities, which are no more than the commonplaces of theological and liturgical expression, into proofs of Lutheran influence."² Before Dr. Dowden wrote, some among us were on the high road to ascribing Dearly beloved in the Lord to the influence of Lieben freunde Christi.

A warning, also, had been given by the first editors of these projects of Cranmer's not to look for too many signs of affinity between Cranmer and the Agenda, for at the time at which they wrote the editors did not know of any evidence that Cranmer had acquaintance with the new books, but only with the men who had used them. They say :

It must be remembered, however, that so far as these services were concerned their conception and their similarity were due less to acquaintance with the new books than to intercourse with the men who had used them. There are features however which distinguish the English services contemplated by Cranmer from those which owed their origin exclusively to Lutheran inspiration.¹

Cranmer's First Part has certain marked features in the distribution of the Psalms and of Holy Scripture, which are not so greatly insisted upon in other modern Orders known to us : first, that the whole of the Psalter is to be said once a month, and divided so that three psalms are to be said at morning and three at evening service ; secondly, that the whole of the Bible is to be read once a year, the New Testament thrice. This monthly recitation of the Psalter and annual reading of the Bible are the distinguishing notes of the First Part. Descending more into particulars there is to be no Venite at Mattins, and no anthems (antiphonae) are to be sung before or after the psalms, Magnificat, or Benedictus. And there are no Responds. Looking for these features in the German Agenda our search is not often rewarded by finding any order very closely allied in these respects to that of Cranmer's. But in the following pages there are brought together orders that are considered by liturgical scholars, or that seemed, perhaps, to present features which ally them to Cranmer's schemes, so that the members of the Henry Bradshaw Society may be able to form their own opinions as to the connexion of Cranmer with some of the Agenda.

To begin in order of time. In 1881 Dr. George F. Seigmund printed in parallel columns, after the manner of Löhe, the Mattins of the Pian Breviary, the Mattins of the Brunswick Agenda of 1544, and the Mattins suggested by Löhe himself in his own Agende.² It seems that Dr. Seigmund may have thought it could be held that Cranmer had drawn his idea from the Brunswick Agenda : while he ventures upon the extraordinary opinion that the "Morning and Evening Prayers of the Anglican Church are substantially the same services as the Mattins and Vespers of the Latin Rite."

It is to be hoped that this may be only an exaggerated and heightened way of saying that the same principles run through both sets of offices. Possibly it is with a view of illustrating this notion that Dr. Seigmund gives in parallel columns the Pian and Brunswick Orders. Fortunately enough, these Brunswick Agenda of 1544 may be found in the British Museum. The book is written in a dialect of Niederdeutsch or Plattdeutsch ; the order for Mattins and Vespers is as follows, beginning with the Saturday Vespers :

The Vespers of Sunday at Brunswick in 1544 are so like those of Saturday that it is not worth while to reproduce them here.

It will be noticed that there is no Lord's Prayer or Domine labia mea as in the Mattins of Part the First ; no metrical hymn or Quicunque ; nor any Preces, which are so prominent a feature of Cranmer's work. Setting aside the anthems and responds which are discarded by Cranmer, the resemblance in the central part of the Brunswick Mattins is considerable ; three lessons precede and one follows Te Deum, but the first lesson may be either from the New Testament or from the Old. Still, there are no benedictions before the lessons as in Part the First, nor can any suggestion of the monthly recitation of the Psalter or reading of the whole Bible once in the year be discovered.

Others have considered that there is abundant evidence of the source of the Mattins and Evensong of the Book of Common Prayer in the tables printed by Löhe in his edition of Agende. They were first, it may be, brought to the notice of the English by Dr. H. E. Jacobs¹ whose opinions have been accepted by Mr. Leighton Pullan. This latter writer is of opinion that Cranmer decided upon a service practically identical with that drawn up in 1542 for use in Schleswig-Holstein. "A comparison of the German and English Mattins seems to place the fact outside the range of any doubt."²

Thus it has been thought well to follow the plan adopted by Löhe, and to show his Schleswig-Holstein Order of 1542 in parallel columns with Cranmer's Part the First.³ With the Schleswig-Holstein, leaving all other Orders printed by Löhe, are given two other Lutheran Kirchenordnungen : one, the Brunswick Ordnung of 1544 ; and the other, Bugenhagen's, taken from his Pia et vere Catholica et consentiens veteri Ecclesiae ordinatio : both of which seem nearer than others in construction to Part the First. It will be seen at a glance that the Agenda of Schleswig-Holstein of 1542 have not so much in common with Cranmer. Schleswig-Holstein opens at once with three psalms and Quicunque vult: while Cranmer has the Lord's Prayer, O Lord open our lips, O God make speed, etc. Gloria Patri, Alleluia, a hymn, three psalms, with the Lord's Prayer again before we reach the three lessons.¹ In Löhe's Schleswig-Holstein Order there are also three lessons out of the New Testament, while Cranmer has two out of the Old and one out of the New Testament. There is no Te Deum in Schleswig-Holstein, though both have Benedictus, Preces, and Collect, but in varying order.

² Leighton Pullan, History of the Book of Common Prayer, Longmans, 1900, p. 160.

It will be noted that a direct examination of the Agenda of Schleswig-Holstein printed in Löhe's tables does not add much support to the opinion that Cranmer borrowed from these for any of his forms for Mattins. Neither do the Braunschweig Wolffenbuttel nor Duke Erich's Agenda in Löhe's tables show any special affinity to Cranmer beyond the resemblance that all these choir offices bear to one another. The other Agenda quoted by Löhe are too late to be of value in determining the source of Cranmer.

A modern writer, Frederick Armknecht, has paid considerable attention to the old German Agenda in the hopes of restoring Mattins and Vespers to their place in the services of the Lutherans. As a result of his studies he gives a table which, he considers, represents the common features of a large number of the Agenda that he has examined. It is here reprinted, leaving out the mystical interpretations of the different parts of the service, with which he seeks to explain matters :

A. Für die Matutin=Ordnung :

Deus in adiutorium.

Gloria Patri.

For Evening Service there is the following scheme :

B. Für die Vesperordnung :

1. Deus in adiutorium. Gloria Patri.
2. Ein bis drei Psalmen mit Antiphone.
3. Lectio mit Summarie und Responsorium.
4. Hymnus.
5. Magnificat (Lobgesang Mariä.)
6. Oratio wie oben.
7. Benedicamus und *Da Pacem.*¹

It will be confessed that there do not appear many of the features that we may specially note in the First Part, or indeed in I. of Edward VI.

Some may ask what may be the Benedicamus and the Da Pacem spoken of at the end of the Lutheran Orders. Benedicamus is a mere versicle and respond,² but Da Pacem is longer, the latter of the two below having the structure of the Memoriae of the Sarum Breviary, that is, an anthem, versicle and respond, and collect,³ said at the end of an office. In the modern Roman Breviary they are called Commemorationes, and may be found at the end of Saturday Vespers. Two forms of the Lutheran Da Pacem are here given :

Da pacem Domine
jnn diebus nostris.

O Herr Gott gib vns dein fried, durch Jhesum deinen son bitten wir alle, Wach auff Herr, warümb schleffestu? wach auff, vñ verstos vns nicht gar! O Herr &c. Warümb verbirgestu dein antlitz vnd vergisest vnsers elendes vnd dranges? O Herr &c. Mach dich auff hilff vns, vnd erlöse vns, vmb deiner güte willen, Denn vnser seele ist gebeuget zu der erden. Denn niemand ist, der vns helffen odder beschützen kan, jnn diesen fehrlichen gezeiten, denn du Herr vnser Vater vnd Gott, Alle[ine].⁴

Another Da Pacem is given a few leaves later. It is ascribed to Martin Luther.

Mr. Edward Burbidge mentions the Kirchen Ordnung of Brandenburg and Nuremberg as not yet having been found in the remains of Cranmer's library, but likely to be full of interest to students of the Book of Common Prayer.² I cannot think that Mr. Burbidge meant to suggest that any part of Cranmer's Projects for Mattins and Evensong had its source in this work of Osiander and Brenz, for it appears to contain no scheme for such offices. At most, there is a missa sicca.³

Another Lutheran Order has been claimed as giving ideas to Cranmer. Dr. Dowden, the late Bishop of Edinburgh, has expressed the opinion that

Of the various forms for Daily Prayer in the German books which I have examined, that which seems to me to have anticipated Cranmer's work most closely is to be found in the Church Order for Calenberg and Göttingen, published in 1542.⁴

Unfortunately I have been unsuccessful in a search for the original in England: and for reproduction I must therefore be content with the same text as that followed by Dr. Dowden.

In spite of the great authority of Dr. Dowden, it must be confessed that the Calenberg-Göttingen Order does not appear to be more nearly allied to Cranmer's First Part than many other Kirchen Ordnungen. There is no introductory Lord's Prayer; while Anthems, and Responds to the Lessons are present; there are no preces, which in all Cranmer's schemes are marked, though absent in Quignon. The reading of the Summarien or Expositions after the Lesson from the New Testament may have been suggested by the mediæval breviary with its comment from the Fathers on the gospel of the day.

Much nearer to Cranmer's ideas has seemed to me Bugenhagen's Pia et vere Catholica et consentiens veteri Ecclesiae ordinatio, which contains not only offices for Mattins and Vespers, but for the remaining Canonical Hours. Its acceptance was certainly not limited to Pomerania, but it was received in Denmark and Norway with Schleswig-Holstein, and it seemed not impossible that it was known to Cranmer.

After entertaining this suspicion for some months it received, quite unexpectedly, some confirmation by finding, in the British Museum, a copy of Bugenhagen's Order with an inscription, in a sixteenth-century handwriting, making apparently a gift of the book from Bugenhagen to Henry the Eighth. If this position can be held, that Bugenhagen's Order was in England in Henry the Eighth's reign, it becomes likely enough that the book may have fallen at one time under Cranmer's notice.

The title of the book spoken of as in the British Museum is as follows :

Ordinatio Ecclesiastica Regnum Daniæ et Norwægiaæ et Ducatum, Sleswicensis, Holtsatiae etcet. Anno Domini M. D. xxxvii.

On the title page is written in a sixteenth-century hand : Inlyto Regi Angliæ etc. Henrico octavo ; doctor pomeranus.²

The following reprint of Bugenhagen is taken not from this book but from the edition in Sehling, which follows the text of 1535:

Pro matutinis.

Primo dicatur symbolum apostolorum et oretur oratio dominica. Mox cantor incipiat aliquam antiphonam, iuxta cuius tonum statim sequantur tres psalmi. Hic† finitis antiphona compleatur. Inde legantur tres lectiones et canantur tria responsoria de tempore, aut si quae alia sunt ex sacris literis ita, ut post singulas lectiones singula sequantur responsoria. Lectiones vero tantum ex bibliis, id est veteri et novo testamento, legantur, ut visum fuerit, et sint breves, sine iube domine, et sine tu autem, etc., sed pronuncientur distincte cum tono, quemadmodum solent legi prophetiae. In fine ultima verba cuiusque lectionis, ut prophetia solebat, sic finiantur: Sol, sol, sol, la, sol, fa, fa. Post tertium responsorium, quod cum gloria patri, etc. canitur, sequatur te deum, etc. Mox cantor incipiat aliquam antiphonam, secundum cuius tonum canatur tantum unus ex psalmis prophetalibus, quae cantica vocantur.

Dominica die: Benedicite omnia, etc.

Feria secunda: Confitebor tibi, domine, quoniam iratus etc.

Feria tertia: Ego dixi etc.

Feria quarta: Exultavit etc.

Feria quinta: Cantemus etc.

Feria sexta: Domine, audivi etc.

Sabbato: Audite coeli etc.

Post hanc antiphonam completam sequatur statim alia antiphona cum benedictus dominus etc. Postea dicatur kyrie eleison, Christe eleison, kyrie eleison, pater noster etc. Et ne nos. Ostende nobis, domine, misericordiam tuam. Et salutare tuum da nobis. Dominus vobiscum. Oremus, cum collecta aliqua de tempore, aut aliqua alia, quae sit sincera. Post amen statim canatur benedicamus, more consueto. Liberum esto, quibus antiphonis uti velint, vel ex psalterio vel aliis, modo sint pia cantica, sive de tempore, sive de festis, quae servabuntur in hoc ducatu, secundum historiam evangelicam etc.

Pro prima.

Non dicatur: Deus in adiutorium, sicut nec in matutinis: Domin labia mea; sed cantetur statim in principio: Iam lucis orto etc. Mox antiphona cum psal. Beati immaculati. Retribue. Post antiphonam completam loco capituli legit lector unam brevem lectionem secundum tonum, ut in matutinis. Ibi vero incipiat in bibliis, ubi finem fecerat in matutinis. Sic perget etiam in tertia et sexta et nona. Mox post hanc lectionem dicat unus: Oremus, cum collecta. Post amen autem nihil sequatur.

in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and probably also in the reigns of Kings Henry VIII. and Edward VI. The inscription on the title page addressed to King Henry VIII. is in a hand not unlike that of Bugenhagen.

Symbolum beati Athanasii: *Quicunque vult salvus esse, tantum dominica die cum psalmis praedictis canatur in prima.*¹

The remaining Canonical Hours follow up to Complin, which is represented by Qui habitat, Nunc dimittis, and preces. The psalms at Vespers begin with Dixit Dominus.

Psalmi in matutinis et vesperis sic ordinentur, ut semper procedatur, ibique rursum altera die incipiatur, ubi superiori die cessatum est. Ita nullo tedium afficiuntur cantantes, nec superstitiosus psalmorum numerus gravabit pie sentientes, Magna vero utilitas erit lectionum, quando bis vel plus in uno anno nulla molestia licebit tota perlegere biblia, et ita ad sacras assuefieri scripturas, ut habeant consolationem ex verbo dei, qui meliorem nunc conditionem, aetate aut aliter impediti, suspicere non possunt, donec deo suum reddant spiritum per solum Jesum Christum, dominum nostrum.²

The first thing that strikes one is the saying of the Credo and Pater noster as preparation for the office, which is quite in the mediæval fashion of the Hours. But then there is no Domine labia nor Deus in adjutorium, no Gloria Patri nor Alleluia: these are in Cranmer's First Part. It is known that Bugenhagen thought these versicles superstitious, though taken from Holy Scripture. In an addition to the Danish edition of his Order he gives these reasons :

At ais: Cur non dicetur Domine labia etc. Deus in adjutorium etc. qvæ bona verba sunt & ex Scriptura Sacra? Respondeo: Qvis prohiberet? Et tamen in eo sensu non canuntur, qvo scripta sunt a Spiritu Sancto. Nam Deus in adjutorium etc. orantur contra persecutores Ecclesiæ. . . . Satis hactenus abusi sumus Scripturis in alieno sensu.³

Then three psalms with an anthem are sung, but no Venite or metrical hymn. Cranmer had three psalms and a hymn, but no Venite or anthem in his First Part. Then come three lessons from the Old and the New Testament, and three responds. Cranmer had no responds, but he has Jube Domine and Tu autem, which are forbidden by Bugenhagen. Te Deum is sung in both Cranmer and Bugenhagen after the third lesson or respond:

next one of the seven Lauds cantica of the mediæval breviary ; Cranmer retained these cantica in one plan of the First Part.¹ In Bugenhagen Benedictus follows with an anthem ; without, in Cranmer. Bugenhagen passes into the preces ; but Cranmer has after Benedictus a collect and Quicunque vult on Sundays. There is in Cranmer no Kyrie eleison or Pater noster, but versicles, much as in Bugenhagen, and the collect at Prime. Bugenhagen intended the recitation of his three psalms to begin where the former recitation had left off, as in the Mattins and Vespers of the mediæval breviary. And the whole of the Bible was also to be read twice or more in the year, thus exceeding the plan of the mediæval breviary, according to which it was to be read once in the twelve months. In these two particulars it would seem that Bugenhagen and Cranmer had much in common, though it may also be maintained that Cranmer could have taken his ideas for the First Part quite as well from the mediæval breviary, or Q. as from Bugenhagen.

The Hessian Kirchenordnung of 1526 is much praised by the Lutheran authorities,² but it does not seem to have been adopted, Luther having dissuaded from the use of it. To provide further means for an independent judgement upon the likeness of the German Agenda to the First Part of Cranmer, this Hessian Order is here reprinted :

Ordinamus denique, ut in universis Ecclesiis laudes matutinae et vespertinae hoc ritu quotidie serventur, et primum matutinum sic : Cantetur psalmus : Venite, exultemus, et unus duo vel tres alii secundum iudicium episcopi, et id quidem sub tonis communibus, quibus psalmi hactenus latine cantati sunt. Psalmus quoque venite, exultemus eodem tono, quo alii cantetur†. Servetur autem is ordo in psalmis cum tonis, ut una hora omnes in primo, alia in secundo, alia in tertio et sic de aliis cantentur. Posthaec cantent in rythmo : Christus Deus misereatur pro dilatatione Regni Christi, vel psalmum : Salvum me fac Deus, quoniam defecit sanctus, aut alius ex his, qui in rythmo positi sunt. Deinde Episcopus aut eius adiutor legat unum caput ex veteri instrumento, cui liberum sit aliquid interpretari, modo id paucis agat, maxime infra hebdomadam, nihilque dicat, nisi diligentissime praemeditatum et examinatum. Denique cantetur : Benedictus Dominus Deus Israel, et hoc tonis consuetis, tono quotidie iuxta ordinem mutato. His absolutis dicat Episcopus : Dominus vobiscum, Respondeatur : et cum spiritu tuo, postea : Oremus, Pater noster quod totum alte dicat, et in fine Ecclesia respondeat : Amen. Item dicat Episcopus : Infunde nobis quaeso Domine Deus noster Spiritum tuum, qui nos in cunctis dirigat, illustretque ac dirigat aeternam veritatem tuam, ac confirmet sic in ea, ut nunquam dividamur a te, et faciat, ut ex fide vivamus, et omnia ex eadem agamus per Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum filium tuum, qui tecum, etc. Respondeatur: Amen. Dominus vobiscum. Resp. et cum spiritu tuo. Benedicamus Domino, Resp. Deo gratias.

Quod spectat ad vespertinas laudes, omnia fiant sicut in matutinis, excepto quod non dicunt Psalmum: Venite, exultemus, et cantent psalmum rythmicum ab eo quem mane cantarunt, et non ex Veteri instrumento sed Novo legant caput unum, et pro Benedictus, canant Magnificat, aut Nunc dimittis, tonis consuetis. Dominicis tamen diebus ac festis cantetur utrumque, prius: Magnificat, postea: Nunc dimittis.

In lectione is ordo servetur. Mane legant per ordinem librorum et capitum ex veteri Instrumento, et dum totum compleverunt, denuo incipient. Sic faciant vespere ex novo instrumento. In psalmis vero is sit ordo, quod psalmorum ordinem sequantur, ut si mane legerint XX, vesperi legant XXI, et cum totum Psalterium absolverint a capite denuo incipient.¹

It is this last paragraph which the seekers after a resemblance between Agenda and Cranmer should most observe. The order of reading the Bible, beginning where the reader had left off the service before, is quite in Cranmer's spirit; and the same with the psalms. But in no distribution of his does it appear that the Old Testament was limited to the morning and the New to the evening service. This is something of a novelty, for the old breviaries did not alternate the reading of the New and the Old Testament as we see here, and shall notice hereafter in other Lutheran Ordnungen; but in the Middle Ages or earlier they read continuously certain groups of the Old or New Testament. Quignon, indeed, ten years later than the Hessian Order, did begin to read the Old and New Testaments concurrently; the first lesson in Q.'s Mattins being of the Old Testament, the second of the New.² Cranmer, adopting this practice, may more reasonably be supposed to have borrowed from Q. in this particular, than from the Hessian Order, or that which is to follow from Schönburg.

To continue the same purpose of exhibiting Kirchenordnungen that may be held to be allied to Cranmer's First Part, the Albertine and the Ernestine Saxon Orders are here given, followed by one from Belzig in Prussia. And first the Albertine Order:

In 1529, at a place called Belzig, a Prussian town in the province of Brandenburg, there is this outline of the Mattins and Vespers :

Alle suntag und ander feierliche fest soll in der pfarkirchen an stat der metten umb sechs hor zu winterzeit, und sommer umb funf hör drei psalmen, zwa oder drei lection aus dem alten und neuen testament durch die knaben gesungen, und die mit antifen und einer collect beslossen werden, darnach das kirchspiel etwan ein deutsch geistlich lied singen soll.

Nach mittag soll durch den pfarrer zur vesper zeit abermals von der sonntags episteln, zu zeiten aber ein artikel oder drei aus dem catechismo ufs einfeldigst und vorstentlichst gepredigt, dafur auch etliche psalmen und lection, darnach aber das magnificat mit den gewöhnlichen versikeln und collecten, suffragia sanctorum ausgenommen, und durch die kirchen etwan geistlich lied gesungen werden.²

Of the Kirchenordnungen that I have come across in an examination principally held in this country, the outline of Bugenhagen, it must be confessed, seems to me that which is nearest allied to the project of Cranmer. Still, it must be owned that there is no such convincing evidence on behalf of the Lutheran source of Cranmer's First Part, as there is of his indebtedness to Quignon in the Second Part.

THE CALENDARS.

There are two Calendars in the manuscript ; one at its very beginning and the other at its end. That at the end would appear to have more connexion with the First than the Second Part : it cannot be intended, so it has been already pointed out, to serve as a lectionary for the Second Part. It may be only a stage in the development of the First Part, but this is speculation.

The Final Calendar has a widely different aspect from that of the ordinary mediæval Calendar, filled with saints. But all the great feasts of Our Lord, the Circumcision, the Epiphany, the Presentation, etc., and the feasts of the Apostles which occur near the end of every month, are retained. So are the four feasts of Our Lady, the Purification, the Annunciation, the Assumption, and the Nativity ; St. Michael on September 29, and All Saints on November 1 ; but not All Souls. Neither festival of the Holy Cross is retained.

It is not easy to detect the principle on which the lesser saints have been chosen or excluded. There has certainly been no slavish following of Sarum. It looks as if the chief doctors of the early Church, eastern or western, had been in the mind of the composer, beginning with St. Hilary in January and ending with St. Martin in November. Phileas and Philoromus seem to be borrowed from Q. who commemorates both on February 4, not February 3 ; and so also Q¹ has Petrus and Dorotheus on September 9, and Q² on September 16 ; neither, as this Calendar has, on July 2. But it does not seem altogether desirable that such obscure saints as Babilas (January 24) and Benjamin the Deacon (February 21) should have been chosen for marked commemoration.

In this Calendar there has been jotted down, without any apparent scheme, in the column for the lesson at Evensong, a number of cyphers, which look as if they were determined by the figures in the column of the third lesson at Mattins. Sometimes they have been struck out, as in the Calendar for March. To what end they have been inserted it is not easy even to make a guess.

Another feature, in which this Calendar differs greatly from the usual mediæval Calendar, is the appearance in it of the references to the lessons to be read in the Divine Service of the day. This looks like a borrowing from Q. who put in his Calendar the numbers of the leaf for the third lessons when taken either from Holy Scripture or from the legends of the saints. This latter practice is not an innovation of Q. It may be found in breviaries published before 1535.¹ The insertion of references to Holy Scripture leads to an appearance quite unusual, for when the book of Scripture in reading changes, the name of the new book is inserted in the Calendar in the same column as the saints, and thus in November Tobit, Judith, Hester, and Job look as if they were placed there to accompany Christian saints like Martin, Britius, Caecilia, and Catherine. This practice of Cranmer does not appear to have been inspired by the ancient martyrologies, which commemorate the Old Testament worthies, a trace of which is to be found to this day on the first of August, when the "Holy Maccabees, martyrs" receive a commemoration.

Calendar of Part the First.—Something of the same sort has happened with the Calendar prefixed to Part the First, only on a larger scale. It has a greater number of saints than that which follows Part the Second. But, perhaps from a following of this first Calendar in the footsteps of the final, where the books of the Bible about to be read are placed with the saints, this Calendar of the First Part has a diversified and irregular appearance given to it by the placing, in the same column as the saints, of the names of the worthies, whether of the Old Testament or of the New, whose actions are described in the lessons of the day marked for reading on that day of the month. Thus David rex appears on May 13 because there is read on that day the 17th chapter of 1 of Samuel or, according to the Vulgate, of Kings, which tells of the combat between David and Goliath. In some of these cases an additional lesson among the Quartae Lectiones has been prepared, as in the case of Abel on January 2: or the intention to prepare one, indicated but not carried out, as with Joseph of Arimathea on April 1.

From the insertions and erasures in the Calendar of the First Part it looks as if Cranmer had written these fourth lessons before he began to make the erasures and insertions in the Calendar. Thus the lesson for Omnes Sancti Defuncti with its merely funeral tone must have been written before the entry in the Calendar was altered back to the older commemoration of All Saints. This is again one of the instances in which Cranmer returned back to the older after having at first preferred the new.

The sources whence Cranmer drew his material for the fourth lessons are various. For the events recorded in Scripture he has naturally taken the Gospels, Acts, and Epistles as his authorities; but he has not confined himself to the Vulgate for his text, for he has used the version of Erasmus in many places without the reason for the choice being very clear. Sometimes he will use a conflated text of Vulgate and Erasmus, as in the lesson for St. Timothy's day.

For the post-apostolic saints, Cranmer has drawn upon the homilies of St. Basil, and St. John Chrysostom, from St. Jerome's de Viris illustribus, and the Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius, and, but rarely, from Socrates. Later on, contemporary writers are borrowed from, such as Quignon's lessons in his breviary, and Witzel's (or Vicelius') Hagiologium. Other indications may be found in the notes to each lesson at the end of the volume.

Babylas and the Forty Martyrs may possibly have been recommended to Cranmer's notice by the favourable mention which Erasmus makes of them :

Si Martyr laudabatur, ordo sumebatur ex preceptionibus generis demonstrativi, veluti quum Chrysostomus celebrat Babylam, Basilius Quadraginta Martyres.¹

Cranmer's fourth lessons cannot be reckoned as very important contributions to hagiographical studies. Some of them run to an inordinate length, without any apparent reason to be found from the greatness of the saint in history or in virtue. Gordius, for instance, commemorated on May 10, has four whole pages of this volume² devoted to him.

The facts recorded in the homily of St. Basil upon Gordius may be looked upon as worthy of credence ; for Commendatore Pio Franchi, who is known throughout Europe for the care with which he sifts the historical accuracy of the legends of the saints, remarks that when St. Basil delivered the homily on St. Gordius there were yet living in Caesarea eye-witnesses of the glorious deeds of the martyr.³

St. Cyprian of Carthage, commemorated on his old day, September 14, has three and a half pages ; but this prolixity may well be excused from the mark left by St. Cyprian on the history of the Church.

If it be a hard matter to make out what has been the determining principle in guiding Cranmer's choice of saints in the Calendar of the very end, it is wellnigh impossible to arrive at any definite decision as to the thoughts which led him to choose the saints in the Calendar of the First Part. We may put aside at once the entries of the saints from the Old Testament, and many of the New, as being suggested by the chapter which was to be read on the same day. The great festivals of Our Lord and Our Lady, of the Apostles, and St. Michael, remain as in the Second, and in the mediæval Calendars.

The influence of St. Basil may be perceived in the choice of Babilas and Mamas, two saints rare in Western Calendars; the Forty Martyrs are in Q. S. and many breviaries. Julitta is very likely from St. Basil.

Quignon may have suggested Phileas and Philoromus; Petrus and Dorotheus and Pamphilus may have been derived from Q², as Q¹ spells the name Pamphilius. Adauctus seems to have been borrowed from Q.

The following table has been drawn up in the hopes that it may assist the reader to understand something of the changes which Cranmer carried out in the Calendar to the First Part and to show the uncertainty and irresolution which were sometimes visible in Cranmer's actions.

PREFACE.

The preface is contained in the First Part, following its Calendar immediately. But the question may be asked if this be the place that Cranmer intended for it, and whether it would not have found surroundings that would have harmonized more with its scope and purpose if it had been set as an introduction to the Second Part. It may be observed that many facts and ideas are borrowed from the prefatory letter to Quignon's Breviary of the second recension, and the Second Part is indebted to Q² for rubrics, anthems, and the like, as well as for the general scheme or framework of the Hours on which it is arranged. Thus it would seem more natural that this Preface should stand at the beginning of the Second Part, rather than at the beginning of the First Part, as it does; for the First Part is far removed from the plan of Q², having only two Hours of prayer instead of the more ancient seven or eight. Cranmer may, however, have felt desirous to show that the principles of the First Part were much the same as those of Q., namely, the recitation of the whole Psalter and the reading of the Bible once in a year. There are, moreover, some parts of the Preface which suit better with the details of the First, rather than with those of the Second, Part. For example, Invitatories are abolished in the First Part, while they persist in the Second; so the Preface declares that Invitatories are cut off.¹

It was through the translation of this Preface into English that the connexion of the Book of Common Prayer with Q¹ and Q² was noticed by the early Tractarians. Cardinal Newman in Tract 75, on the Roman Breviary, published in 1836, noticed Quignon's attempt at reform to which he metes out somewhat qualified praise as follows:

The Cardinal's Breviary was drawn up on principles far more agreeable to those on which the Reformation was conducted, and apparently with the same mixture of right and wrong in the execution. With a desire of promoting the knowledge of Scripture, it showed somewhat of rude dealing with received usages, and but a deficient sense of what is improperly called the imaginative part of religion. His object was to adapt the Devotions of the Church for private reading, rather than chanting in choir, and so to encourage something higher than that almost theatrical style of worship, which, when reverence is away, will prevail, alternately with a slovenly and hurried performance, in the performance of Church Music.²

² J. H. Newman, Tracts for the Times, No. 75, p. 13. "A slovenly and hurried performance . . . of Church Music" is by no means confined to the Church of Rome.

After some further comments he prints the Preface to the Book of Common Prayer Concerning the Service of the Church as far as to the end of the third paragraph, following the text of 1662. The compositor would seem to have disliked the word wit in the first line and altered it into will of man: and, curiously enough, the Dutch printers of Gasquet and Bishop misread the very same word, and changed it into art.

Thus the connexion between Quignon and the Book of Common Prayer was noticed by Newman some nine years before it was spoken of by Sir William Palmer in his Origines Liturgicae of 1845. For this book appeared first in 1832, the second edition in 1836, and the third in 1839, but not until the fourth edition, in 1845, does there appear any suggestion of a relationship between Quignon and the Book of Common Prayer. Then the Preface to the I. of Edward VI. is printed in a parallel column¹ with part of the Preface to Q².

From a paragraph in Cardinal Newman's Apologia it might be thought that his interest in the Roman Breviary arose after the death of Hurrell Froude. He tells us that he chose Hurrell Froude's copy of the Breviary as a keepsake.² Hurrell Froude died on February 28, 1836, and Newman's paper on the Breviary is dated June 24, 1836. One does not know how quickly Newman worked; but supposing that the Breviary first came into Newman's hands at the end of March, three months seem but a short time for the preparation of such a paper of 148 pages, including translations of the Breviary, services for a Sunday, for August 6, and August 10, and for the commemoration of the faithful Departed, as well as a service on Bishop Ken's day, with lessons for the second nocturn, which look as if written by Newman himself. Can Newman in three months have made himself master of so much of the history and structure of the Breviary as this paper shows, supposing him to know nothing of them in March 1836? A late Dean of St. Paul's, Dr. Church, tells us of a source from whence it is possible that Newman may have received an earlier equipment for dealing with the Breviary. He says:

Bishop Lloyd's lectures had taught him [Hurrell Froude] and others, to the surprise of many, that the familiar and venerated Prayer Book was but the reflexion of mediæval and primitive devotion, still embodied in its Latin forms in the Roman Service books.³

class. It is known that it was to the Breviary that the Bishop's attention had been early directed when a curate in the North of London, and it does not seem too impossible a supposition that Dr. Lloyd may have instructed his pupils in the connexion that exists between the two prefaces of Q. and I. of Edward VI. If once a copy of the Quignon Breviary were put into the hands of a student of the Book of Common Prayer it would need no great exertion on his part to perceive the alliance between the two prefaces. It is known that this did happen in a neighbouring University. Dr. Benson, the Archbishop of Canterbury, told me that when he was an undergraduate at Cambridge he had remarked for himself the relation between Q. and the Book of Common Prayer, which soon after he found had been already widely recognized.

But even before Cardinal Newman or Dr. Lloyd, the resemblance of the Book of Common Prayer to Q. had been noticed on the Continent at the end of the sixteenth century. Schulting Steinwich, repeating the old and somewhat ill-founded criticism of Q. that it taught men only to read and not to pray, adds as a marginal comment :

DISTRIBUTION OF THE PSALTER.

In the Second Part, with its eight Canonical Hours, we have but little information given us of the way in which the Psalter was to be distributed through the Hours. All we are told at each Hour is : Psalmi ex ordine designati, and this runs throughout. Judging from the adherence to the old number of Hours in the rest of the Second Part it would seem possible that Cranmer's intention here was that the Psalter was to be recited once a week, as in the old Breviary. But after what distribution? If after the old distribution in the Sarum Breviary, where for certain of the Hours the psalms were fixed for every day of the year, as for Terce, Sext, None, and Complin, it would have been easy at these Hours to have pointed out the portions of Beati immaculati (Ps. cxix.) at Terce, Sext, and None, or the Psalms iv. xxx. xc. and cxxxiiii. at Complin. But this has not been done; the direction Psalmi ex ordine designati is repeated as if the psalms were not fixed, but were to vary with every day in the week. And in the Mattins of the last three days of Holy Week, where the psalms are given, they do not correspond in number with those of Sarum, but continue three in number as elsewhere in Part the Second. They correspond in number with those of Q, but they are not the same as those directed in Q.

It is mere speculation to suggest any particular distribution not Sarum. It may be noticed that there are no proper psalms at the greater festivals, Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, Ascension, or Pentecost, though the cues or incipits are given for the lessons. It was a blot in both the Quignonian recensions that no proper psalms for any festival were prescribed; so that the distribution of the psalms in the Second Part is in this respect like the distribution of Quignon. Seeing how much Cranmer has borrowed from Q² in the anthems and lessons of this Part, it seems quite possible that he may have borrowed his distribution of the Psalter also from Q., though there is no proof of this, and hardly a high degree of likelihood. It may be that Cranmer had devised a distribution of his own, as Q. did, and that it is now lost.

Unlike the Second Part we have in the First Part a tolerably full account of the distribution of the Psalter. In the first place we are told that the Psalter is to be said twelve times in the year, while the gospels and epistles in the New Testament are repeated three times, and the rest of the Bible only once, in the year.

This recitation of the Psalter only once in the month is a very distinct break with antiquity as known in England. In the English secular Breviaries, and all the Psalters following the Gregorian for their distribution, the whole Psalter was in theory repeated once a week. This was also the case with the Benedictine distribution and with the new arrangement in Quignon. The only ancient distribution of the Psalter other than for a week was that at Milan, and in this church the whole Psalter was recited but once a fortnight.¹ It is not known if this precedent had come under Cranmer's notice. There is a precedent, still more to the purpose, of a recitation of the Psalter but once a month by the Humiliates of Milan, as Becon calls them. But their reformed Breviary only appeared in 1548, and it seems extremely doubtful if its existence could have been known to Cranmer before the compilation of the First Part. The Order may have been known, for it is spoken of by Foresti of Bergamo,² and Cranmer possessed a copy of the work in which the history of the Humiliates is given in a few words.¹ And further, a disreputable writer, Thomas Becon, who was Cranmer's chaplain, borrows Foresti's account of these religious, though he does not add much to our knowledge of them.²

The Breviary of the Humiliates is of interest not only because it resembles in one point the contemporary reform of Cranmer, but because it reveals the length to which reform may go if only it have the protection of the Roman Curia. The changes were all sanctioned by a papal letter from Paul III. The Humiliates followed the rule of St. Benedict, so it is legitimate to consider that at first they followed the Benedictine distribution of the Psalter, reciting it once a week. In the reform authorized by Paul III. the whole Psalter was recited only once a month. Further, it will be admitted that for the breviary lessons and psalms the Vulgate, as a rule, is the authorized version of the Roman Church. Yet the Humiliates have taken, even for Venite, a version which in 1548 was only 6 years old; a version by Isidore Clarius, a monk of Monte Cassino, afterwards Bishop of Foligno. It was printed in folio at Venice by Peter Schoeffer in 1542. A second edition appeared in 1555.³ With this we may compare Cranmer's use of the version of the New Testament by Erasmus for the Quartae Lectiones spoken of below.⁴

But though the distribution of the Psalter to be recited once a month instead of once a week was a break with antiquity, yet the determination to read three psalms only at each hour was by no means so great an innovation. The Sarum Breviary would supply many such instances. The Mattins of Our Lady show only three psalms⁵; and each nocturn of festivals had only three psalms and three lessons. What, perhaps, would be more influential with Cranmer would be the fact that throughout the Quignon Breviary, Sundays, festivals, and week-days alike, every hour had only three psalms.⁶

I do not find this passage in The Relikes of Rome, also printed by John Day, but without date, which appears to be earlier and shorter than the edition of 1563. Relics of Rome appeared again in Becon's Worckes, London, John Day, vol. iii. and this passage about the Humiliates is on fo. ccxiii. b.

⁵ Sarum Breviary, ii. 286.

⁶ For precedents before Q. of the limitation of the number of psalms to three in each hour, see The Second Recension of the Quignon Breviary, H.B.S., 1912, vol. ii. p. 39.

This device of Cranmer's, giving three psalms to each service, was not continued into I. of Edward VI. There the psalms are arranged mainly, it would appear, according to their length, though here and there they seem to fall into three by a natural arrangement. Out of 60 divisions 27 are in three. And this number is that often used in the Church of England to this day. Three psalms for a division are commonly affected by the Anglican authorities. In the Proper Psalms of the present Prayer Book and on special occasions, such as the Consecration of Churches,¹ three psalms are often chosen.

To return to Cranmer's scheme for the distribution of the Psalter in the First Part, which had only two Hours of prayer in each day. It will be noticed that he intended three psalms to be said in the morning and three in the evening.² But to accomplish this, some management was needed with a Psalter of only 150 psalms, and a month of 30 days. This will only allow five psalms a day; but six are wanted for every day, not merely five. So in a month of thirty days, thirty more psalms must be found to make up the 180 psalms that are needed. These are to be found in the following ways: Beati immaculati will as usual be divided into 22 parts. This provides 21 more psalms, making 171 psalms in all, leaving seven more to be provided. Apparently the seven canticles from Lauds were thought of, which raises the total to 178, and then by dividing one long psalm, the ninth, into two, and also the long canticle, Audite caeli quae loquor, from Saturday Lauds, we attain the required total of 180.

This, to begin with, was Cranmer's plan for the First Part. But he has made alterations in the manuscript by which it has been changed into something different. He determined to leave out the seven canticles, and in their place divide eight long psalms into two (17. 67. 68. 77. 88. 104. 105. 106, Vulgate numbering), by which eight more psalms were secured; and thus with the 22 from Beati immaculati and two from the division of the ninth psalm, thirty psalms could be added to the original 150, and so the necessary 180 were attained. There was precedent among the Benedictines for the division of psalms; and the practice has lately received full Papal sanction in the new Roman Psalter of 1911.

The alterations made in the manuscript leave it in a state that is not altogether clear.² To present each scheme in a form easy to be read, both have been here printed in parallel columns side by side.

For Cranmer's plan of beginning the recitation of the Psalter again at the place where the recitation left off there is in the Mattins and Vespers of the mediæval distribution very good authority. The Mattins of Sunday begins with Ps. i. Beatus vir, and the Psalter is read on through the Mattins of every day in the week until Ps. cviii. Deus laudem, the last of the Mattin psalms of Saturday, is reached. Vespers on Sunday is begun with Ps. cix. Dixit Dominus, and the rest of the Psalter, with exceptions, as at Mattins, is read during the week at Vespers. Many of the Lutheran Agenda imitated this distribution, saying the psalms from the Mattin portion of the Psalter at Mattins and from the Vesper portion at Vespers. Amongst the numerous French churches which rearranged their Psalter in the eighteenth century there was the church of Langres, where in 1731 was brought out a new breviary, which preserved much of the ancient distribution of the Psalter on the Sunday; but on the Monday, beginning at Mattins with Ps. x. it thence went on in numerical order through the Psalter for each hour, excepting Compline, to Vespers on Saturday, where the distribution ended with Ps. cxliv. The author of this distribution might have been inspired by Cranmer.¹ This recitation of the Psalter in the order as it stands in the Bible is quite perceptible in the old Gregorian distribution. But it was wholly abandoned by Quignon, and after him by Colbert and the French Bishops of the eighteenth century, who followed the practice of selecting those psalms which they thought most appropriate. And in 1911 this idea found a home, to the surprise of many, in the Roman Breviary itself.

LESSONS.

It may be gathered from the Preface² that one of Cranmer's aims was to ensure the reading of the whole of the Bible once a year in the Divine Service; an aim commendable if caused by a desire to follow closely the practice of antiquity. Accordingly, we find in our manuscript three different schemes of Bible readings arranged for the year. One, attached to Part the Second, is based upon the Christian year, beginning with Advent, and is arranged by the week.³ The other two are based upon the Calendar, and follow the months, beginning with January; one precedes Part the First,⁴ and the other follows Part the Second, quite at the end of the manuscript.⁵

Lessons in the Second Part.—To take first the table of lessons that belongs to the Second Part, which is thought by some to have been the earliest of the projects of Cranmer's reform.

This, it has been said, follows the plan of the Christian year; it provides three lessons for Mattins, one for Lauds, and one for Vespers. The first and second Mattin lessons are almost invariably taken from the same book, usually of the Old Testament; the third Mattin lesson is always taken from the New Testament; the lesson at Lauds is always a selection from one of the sapiential books; the lesson at Vespers is usually taken from the book that is in reading for the first and second lessons at Mattins; thus most commonly from the Old Testament.

The series of the first and second lessons shows plainly the influence of that distribution of lessons⁶ upon which is based the present maimed distribution of scripture lessons in the Roman

⁶ There is some account of this ancient distribution in the Introduction to the Second Recension of the Quignon Breviary, H.B.S. vol. ii. p. 47. For other distributions, see Ernst Ranke, Die kirchliche Pericopensystem, Berlin, Reimer, 1847, pp. 12-37.

Breviary. Isaiah was read in Advent ; the Pauline Epistles were begun directly after Christmas during the three weeks named, after Quignon's awkward expression, Dominicae post adventum. But all the Epistles were not read through ; only the Epistle to the Romans and the first to the Corinthians were read during these weeks.

In the ancient distribution the Prophets, with the exception of Jeremiah, were begun in November, Isaiah being read last of all, during Advent. It has been said that in the distribution now being discussed, Isaiah was read in Advent ; but the Prophets were read during the Dominicae vagantes. This is another expression borrowed from Quignon, and it is used for a name to those weeks after the Epiphany and after Pentecost, at the very end of those seasons, which vary in number and place year by year. The first two or three of the Dominicae vagantes would commonly come after the Epiphany and the remainder immediately before Advent.

The first and second lessons at Mattins of the Dominicae vagantes in this distribution are given up to the Prophets, and thus it might happen, when there was a long season after Pentecost, that the prophets would be read at their old time, in the late autumn ; it may be noticed that Jeremiah was read in this distribution also in the late autumn, during the three last Sundays after Pentecost. Thus an arrangement was contrived by which was preserved some part of the ancient distribution in which the Prophets were read immediately before Christmas, though Jeremiah was indeed anciently read during the fortnight before Easter.

In the ancient distribution, and even in the mediæval breviary, Genesis was begun to be read at Septuagesima, and the books that follow were continued until Ruth was ended on the Saturday before Passion Sunday. But in the distribution now being considered, though Genesis was begun at Septuagesima, yet Ruth was not attained until the second week after Pentecost. Then during the summer the first and second lessons at Mattins, with the lesson at Vespers, were taken from the four books of the Kings, the books of Esdras I. and II., Tobit, Judith, Esther, Job, and lastly Jeremiah, which, it has been said, ended the weeks after Pentecost, before the second part of the Dominicae vagantes began.

Thus it will be noticed that in this distribution of Cranmer's the books of the Old Testament are read with a good deal of completeness. In fact, with the exception of Chronicles, Ezekiel, the Song of Solomon, and Esdras III. and IV., every book in the Bible is read. Of the individual books the greater part of them is read through, some chapters being here and there omitted for good reasons, such as chapters 11, 35, and 52 of Isaiah which are left out, clearly because these chapters are read as lessons on the Sundays in Advent, and it would have been unprofitable to repeat these chapters so soon in the same season. Chapter 12 is also omitted : it is the canticle at Monday Lauds in the old Breviary, and the chapter is very short, containing nothing but the canticle ; but the chapters containing the other canticles for Lauds have not been omitted. Had this been done, a strong argument would have been given for thinking that in the Second Part the canticles from the old Breviary were to be said at Lauds after the manner of Q., that is, that in the place of a third psalm the canticle of the day was to be said. But the canticle at Lauds rarely takes up the whole of the chapter ; and possibly it was intended that in the Second Part the canticle was to be omitted, while the remaining verses of the chapter should be read as a lesson. Besides, most of the chapters containing the canticles at Lauds are read at Vespers, not at Mattins.

To sum up. It may be said that most of the books in the Old Testament are read through, not omitting a single chapter. There is not a chapter omitted from Daniel, Baruch, and the Minor Prophets, with the exception of Micah and Zechariah. Exodus is complete, also Judges, Ruth, the four books of the Kings, except the fourth book from which two chapters are left out, Tobit, Judith, Esther, and Job. Some chapters which are but lists of names have been omitted ; as Genesis 10, Joshua 21 : while more than this has been left out of Leviticus, Numbers, and Jeremiah.

The books of the New Testament are read at the third lesson of Mattins. There is one exception : the Pauline Epistles to the Romans and the first to the Corinthians are read as the first and second lessons at Mattins in the season of the year immediately after Christmas. This is a mutilated following of the tradition of the ancient distribution in which the Pauline Epistles were read in the interval between Christmas and Septuagesima.

Hardly any chapter has been left out of the Epistles, Pauline or Catholic. But the Gospels and Acts seem to have been rather capriciously dealt with. The first three chapters of St. Matthew, the second of St. Luke, all of St. John after the 13th, are not here.¹ From all the Gospels the Passion is omitted, for the chapters containing this sacred story are read at Mattins in Passontide,² St. John beginning his portion with the raising of Lazarus. Of Acts the first two chapters are left out.³ It should be noticed that not a single chapter of the Apocalypse is read, though it appeared in the ancient distribution during the Paschal Season.

It is not, I am told, read in the Divine Service of the Orthodox Church of the East.¹

Nothing is allowed to interfere with the reading of a part of the Sapiential books at Lauds. This Sapiential chapter is spoken of in the general rubric,² as being of the same importance as Benedictus itself. Even Passiontide and Easter day, which have special lessons for Mattins and Vespers, continue the portion of the Sapiential course at Lauds. The lesson at Lauds begins in Advent with Proverbs, and continues throughout the Christian year up to Advent again with Ecclesiastes and Wisdom, ending on the last Saturday before Advent with the last chapter of Ecclesiasticus. No chapter has been omitted; but the portions to be read must oftentimes have consisted of but few verses, more approaching in length to a little chapter than a lesson.³

Lessons in last Calendar.—The distribution of lessons set out in the Calendar that follows the Second Part does not at first sight seem to belong to the Second Part; and this notion is clenched by finding that the lessons are not arranged for an extract from the Sapiential books at Lauds, as Part the Second directs,⁴ but the Sapiential books appear by themselves at Evensong from the middle of August to the end of November. Possibly Cranmer may have devised a third scheme, of which only this trace has come down to us.

In this distribution there are arrangements for three lessons at Mattins and one at Evensong. Thus it differs both from that in the Table of Lessons of Part the Second which has a lesson at Lauds, as just pointed out, and from that in the Calendar of Part the First, which has two lessons for Evensong. Also in this third distribution, following the Second Part, there is nothing left of the ancient distribution shown in the reading of Genesis

³ It may be remarked that the ancient distribution of Scripture was made in groups of books that had some relation to each other. Thus, in the late autumn from November 1 to Christmas the Prophets were read; from Christmas to Septuagesima, the Pauline Epistles; from Septuagesima to Passion Sunday, the Octateuch; but from Passion Sunday to Pentecost a group that has little in common, Jeremiah, the Acts of the Apostles, the Revelation, and the Catholic Epistles; from Pentecost to November 1, the books of the Kings, the Sapiential books, Job, Tobit, Judith, Esther, Esdras, and Maccabees. Thus there are five groups, roughly corresponding perhaps to the natural seasons of the year, but having little relation to the Christian year, except that by the reading of Jeremiah in Passiontide the Lamentations are read on the last days of Holy Week.

It was a great fault of the ancient distribution that the Gospels were not read. At the most the gospel of the day was read at the end of Mattins, but even this became attenuated to a mere incipit, introductory to a homily on the gospel by a Father.

at the beginning of Septuagesima. But Genesis is begun in the first days of January, and this book furnishes first and second lessons at Mattins until February 19; then Exodus, with selections from Leviticus, Numbers, and the rest of the Octateuch, to June 24. After this the historical books are begun, with Esdras, and the Sapiential and Deuterocanonical books, until December 1, when Isaiah is begun and continues to January 3. This is the only trace that can be noticed in this Calendar of the ancient distribution of the books of the Bible.

The third lesson at Mattins is taken wholly from the New Testament. The Gospels are begun on January 2, and for some unknown reason are taken in the order of Luke, John, Mark, Matthew; then the Acts and the Epistles follow in their order as in the New Testament, with twelve chapters of the book of the Revelation, ending on November 30. Chapters from Mark and Luke are read during December.

The lesson at Evensong is taken from the Prophets beginning with Jeremiah, Baruch, Ezekiel, and Daniel, followed by some of the Minor Prophets, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Wisdom, and Ecclesiasticus, which ends on December 30. Isaiah is begun on December 1 and supplies the first and second lessons at Mattins, and the lesson at Evensong for all that month. It has been said above that this is the only trace of the influence of the ancient distribution that can be detected. This trace appears again in the lectionary of I. of Edward VI.

Whence Cranmer took the plan of this distribution is not clear. One determined to see in it the influence of Q² may perhaps detect it in the month of November.¹ There is a German distribution in which Genesis and all following up to the Prophets are read at Mattins, and the Prophets and all following up to the end of the Old Testament are read at Vespers.²

In this distribution we see Cranmer's desire to put the whole of the Old and New Testaments before the people; but at the same time must be remarked the little success that it attained. The minor prophets are hardly read, and there is shown a curious anticipation of the modern desire that the deuterocanonical sapiential books should receive much attention. But, on the other hand, the historical books, so much disliked by the moderns, fill up the first and second morning lessons of the months from January to October inclusive. To November are given Tobit Judith, Esther, and just four chapters of Job. The philosophical nature of the remaining chapters of Job may have been considered too hard for the understanding of the people. It has been said that Isaiah takes the first and second lessons of December in the morning and the one lesson in the evening.

By means of the third lesson at Mattins nearly all the New Testament is read through; with exceptions, the distribution follows the order of the books as they stand in the Bible. The New Testament is only read once in the year, not, as directed in the First Part, three times in the year.¹

Lessons in Part the First.—In the Table of Lessons accompanying the Calendar prefixed to the First Part, Cranmer seems to have perceived that some of the dispositions to be found in the table following Part the Second are not quite successful. For example, he no longer takes the first two lessons at Mattins from the same book of the Bible, but throughout this table now being considered they are of different books. For example, on January I, at Mattins, the first chapter of Genesis is read for the first lesson, the first of Isaiah for the second, and the first of Matthew for the third. Then follows what has not been seen before: two lessons at Evensong; one from Genesis 2 and the other from Romans 1—the only trace to be found in this table of the ancient distribution which ordered the Pauline Epistles to be begun after Christmas. This distribution of the New Testament, the reading of the Gospels and Acts at Mattins, and of the Epistles at Evensong, passed into the Calendar of I. of Edward VI. and lasted till the revision of the Lectionary about 1870.

The books in the Bible are read precisely in the order in which they are to be found in the Bible. The books of the New Testament were read thrice in the year in the same way.

In this distribution Cranmer has been entirely successful if his aim were to ensure the reading of the whole of the Bible. It may be said that not a single chapter of any book has been omitted, excepting the Apocalypse, which is not read at all. The third and fourth books of Esdras are read completely through, and the second book of the Maccabees is finished on December 31.

The lessons seem to follow the old divisions into chapters. Here and there, where the chapters are long, they are divided into two lessons. This is especially noteworthy in the long chapters of Maccabees.

Quartae Lectiones.—Cranmer appears to have written for the first three months of the year all the Quartae Lectiones that were in his mind. But after the middle of March, the entries of a name followed by a blank page become numerous, and are only indications of intentions never carried out. Apparently he did not intend to write lessons for every name in the Calendar taken from the Old Testament. Thus, in the month of January only

Abel has a fourth lesson, though the names of Noah, Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph announce to us that their deeds are about to be read in the first lessons of the day. Later on, Anna the wife of Elkanah, the Centurion whose servant was healed by Our Lord, the Syrophœnician woman, Nathan the prophet, Elijah, Anna the prophetess, Elisha, Hezekiah, Josiah, and many others have given up to them pages, blank except for their names. It would be hard for Cranmer to write any account beyond what is told of the worthies in Scripture itself. Thus the absence of fourth lessons for these may be accounted for. The absence of the lessons for Irenaeus, Cyril, Laurence, the Assumption, and the Nativity of Our Lady, may be due more to want of leisure, or inclination, than other motives.¹

COLLECTS.

The chief source of the collects both in the First and Second Parts seems to be the Sarum Breviary: here and there collects may be met taken from the Sarum Missal, but not many. As to Q. as a source, it is hard to recognize any collects that may not have been drawn from Sarum equally well as from Q.

In the First Part it may be noticed that instead of the traditional assignment of collects to separate Sundays and feast days, collects are appointed for whole seasons like Advent and Christmas.² For example, there is only one prayer for all Advent, one for the season from Christmas Day to the second Vespers of the Epiphany, and one only from Twelfth Day to Septuagesima, and another from Septuagesima to Lent. The same kind of allocation occurs from the first Sunday in Lent to Passion Sunday, and from Passion Sunday to Easter, and so on until Trinity Sunday. Then suddenly, after Trinity, the novelty ceases, and each Sunday has the same collect given to it as formerly it had in Sarum. In I. of Edward VI. Cranmer returns to the more ancient assignment, which we see also in Part the Second.

A series of collects for Advent, Christmas, Candlemas, Passiontide, Easter, and Pentecost, arranged in a manner not unlike that of Cranmer, may be found in an Albertine Saxon Kirchenordnung of 1539. Like Cranmer's they are all translations from the Latin.³ He may have borrowed the idea of reducing the number of collects from this pattern; but, just as well, he may have thought of it himself.

³ Emil Sehling, Die evangelischen Kirchenordnungen, Leipzig, Reisland, 1902. I. Abth. i. Hälften, S. 280. There is a like series in the Brandenburg-Nürnberg Kirchenordnungen of 1533, in Ae. L. Richter, Die evangelischen Kirchenordnungen, Leipzig, Günther, 1871, Ed. i. S. 205.

In the Second Part the traditional allotment of a several collect to each Sunday or Festival is much better maintained. In the greater number the collects are those which may be found for the same day in S. or Q. But not always. Setting aside the importation of the collect usually said at Prime into the office at Lauds and vice versa,¹ and the substitution of a special collect at None,² there are but few cases of such change to be found elsewhere. At Sexagesima a Christmas collect is to be found³; another Lenten collect is substituted for the traditional collect of the first Sunday in Lent⁴; in both these cases it is likely that a theological motive dictated the change. The Palm Sunday collect is made to serve for the whole fortnight from Passion Sunday to Easter⁵; and a Lenten collect introduced for the three days between Trinity Sunday and Corpus Christi.⁶

It may be noticed that in neither Part are any collects given to Saints' days. The substitution in Part the Second of the collect for the sixth day after Christmas for that of Sexagesima is very likely due to the mention of the protection of the Doctor of the Gentiles in the original Sexagesima collect. It was avoided in I. of Edward VI. by the substitution of by thy power for doctoris gentium protectione. There are two English Missals, one of Durham, the other of Whitby, which read tua semper protectione in place of that of Doctoris gentium protectione.⁷

It will be noticed that whenever the verb mereor appears in liturgical forms, such as collects or hymns, Cranmer has substituted for it the word valeo. Doubtless this change has been made from some theological motive. But in itself the change is not very important, for in mediæval Latin the two words have much the same meaning. This has been pointed out by several writers.

Commenting upon a passage in Peter of Cluny, Dr. Maitland speaks thus :

“ Post terram mererentur et cœlum, et quæ sua erant ex potestate, hominum fierent ex ipsius benignitate.” I believe that I give the true sense of the author, that is, the true sense of mereor—as commonly used by writers of the dark ages—which is (as I think I could shew by a good many examples, which some criticisms that I have seen have led me to notice, but which it would be out of place here to transcribe,) to arrive at, or obtain, or come to the possession of, some honour or benefit, without reference to personal desert, or what a protestant would understand to be referred to in the popish doctrine of merit.¹

In the same way Dr. Trench, the Archbishop of Dublin, so well known for his philological attainments, writes :

It is hardly necessary to observe to any who have the slightest acquaintance with medieval Latin, that mereor in it is continually used in the sense simply of to obtain, without in the least implying any merit as the ground of that obtaining. The implied merit, which of course originally belonged to the word, has fallen quite out of sight.²

And Dr. William Bright of Christ Church :

The often-recurring word mereamur has not been rendered “may deserve” or “may merit,” because those verbs would convey a false notion of the original, making it express the doctrine of “condignity”; but by such words as “may obtain,” or “may be enabled to have”; not by any means with a wish to ignore the fact, that it also sometimes implies the being “fitted” to obtain, and sometimes being “rewarded” with.³

In the history of the Gregorian Sacramentary we have an instance of a converse change of valeamus into mereamur. The collect super populum of the Saturday before Passion Sunday ends with : ut tuae consolationis gratiam invenire valeamus. This last persists in a good number of early and late sacramentaries and missals, and mereamur in place of valeamus could only be found in one instance in those which were examined for the edition of the Westminster Missal.⁴

There is, indeed, one case in which an ancient and important manuscript of the Gregorian Sacramentary, that preserved at Cambray, has mereamur where the other two, the Vatican manuscripts, Ottobonian and Regina, have valeamus.⁵ This valeamus continues in all the editions of the Roman Missal examined by Dr. Lippe,⁶ until the edition of Pius V., when it is changed into mereamur, and so continues to the present day.

The Correctors of Pius V. may have had an animus as Cranmer may have had, but in the opposite direction.

There are similar exchanges in the different manuscripts and editions of the Sarum Missal. Most editions of the prayer just before Communion, Deus pater fons et origo, end with seruire valeamus: some two editions have servire mereamur.¹ The manuscripts which were examined for the edition to be issued by the Oxford Press have only valeamus.

More recently, a Swedish professor from the University of Upsala has pointed out a similar use of mereor.

METRICAL HYMNS.

With only one exception the hymns,³ in both Parts have been taken from ancient or mediæval sources. The hymns are given at length in the First Part, while only the first lines appear in the Second. The chief source must be the Sarum Breviary, while Clichtoveus has been called in to contribute better readings than the mediæval texts, and in some cases his judgement has been approved by the preponderance of his chosen variant in the mediæval manuscripts investigated by Dreves and Blume. It does not seem that Cranmer should be blamed for availing himself of the best scholarship of his time. In all cases his emendations have been very slight, and leave the text of the hymn untouched: not to be compared for a moment with the cruel excoriations committed by the Correctors of Urban VIII. in the seventeenth century. Dr. Trench, the Archbishop of Dublin, a scholar famous for his knowledge of the Christian poetry of the Middle Ages, speaks thus of Clichtoveus :

Several of the hymns of Adam of St. Victor had got abroad, and were in use at a very early date, probably during the author's life: but till very lately we were mainly indebted to Clichtoveus, a Roman Catholic theologian of the first half of the sixteenth century, for what larger acquaintance with them we could obtain. Among numerous other works which he published was the Elucidatorium Ecclesiasticum, Paris, 1515; Basle, 1517, 1519; Paris, 1540, 1556 (the best edition, and much richer in hymns than any which went before it); Cologne, 1732; and, in an abridged form, Venice, 1555: . . . The book, which is rather scarce, was till very lately of absolute necessity for the student of the Christian hymnology, above all for the student of Adam of St. Victor's hymns. . . . it was long a principal source of the text, and had highest authority therein; Clichtoveus having drawn it, as he himself assures us, from copies of the hymns preserved in the archives of St. Victor itself.¹

The stanza in Vexilla Regis, the first line of which is O crux ave spes unica, is still found in the First Part, notwithstanding that Bugenhagen denounced it as impious.² This is the more noteworthy because, of all the Kirchenordnungen that appeared in Germany in the early days of the Reformation, Bugenhagen's Ordinatio is the only one of which we have at present some evidence that a copy was in England in the days of Henry the Eighth³; and thus it is possible that it may have fallen under the notice of Cranmer.

Of the twenty-seven hymns to be found in Part the First, there are five which do not appear in the index of hymns in the Sarum Breviary. Agnoscat omne saeculum is not Sarum, and only the first two stanzas are to be found in the York Breviary as the hymn at Prime at Christmas. The hymn is of some antiquity, being attributed to Venantius Fortunatus by Clichtoveus.⁴ The following breviaries, mostly printed before the end of the sixteenth century, are said to contain the hymn: Arras, Cambray, Liège, Metz, Prague, Upsala, Avranches, Antwerp, St. Omers, Bruges, Limoges, Tournay, Utrecht, and some three or four others, the contractions for the names of which I do not recognize. The greater number of the breviaries quoted by Dr. Chevalier spring from the Low Countries.⁵

Magno salutis gaudio likewise does not seem to be in the Sarum books. Dr. Chevalier calls it Ambrosian, and ascribes it doubtfully to St. Gregory the Great. The manuscripts collated by Blume come largely from Milan.⁶

Festum nunc celebre is attributed to Rabanus Maurus by Dr. Chevalier. As might be expected, the breviaries quoted are mainly German: Strassburg, Augsburg, Basle, Cologne, Geneva, Mentz, etc.

O Pater summae is a paraphrase made by Clichtoveus¹ upon a much older hymn, O Pater sancte, mitis atque pie. This is contained in the Sarum² and York³ Breviaries, with many others abroad. It is usually assigned to Trinity Sunday, and in Part the Second it is the hymn for Mattins on that feast.⁴ Of this O Pater sancte a much earlier text, with interlinear Saxon version, may be found in a Cotton Manuscript in the British Museum, Julius A. vi. fo. 71 b. It has been edited in the Hymnarium Sarisburicense, published by Mr. James Darling in 1851, p. 117. The paraphrase was doubtless made by Clichtoveus with a view of bringing the hymn into agreement with humanistic ideas, following the practice afterwards adopted by the Correctors of Urban VIII.

All the metrical hymns of Part the Second appear in the Sarum Breviary, though not always at the Hours there assigned to them. In former times there was no unchanging rule for the allocation of hymns, just as there was no unchanging rule for the allocation of Saints' days.

ANTHEMS.

The Anthems in Part the Second Cranmer seems to have chosen somewhat capriciously from S. or Q² as his fancy moved him. There are few not taken from Holy Scripture. He has kept one fine anthem of the Western Church, O admirabile commercium,⁵ for the first Vespers of Christmas; but, strangely, he has preserved none of the beautiful great Oes of Advent, which might have recommended themselves to him as they are mere centoës of Holy Scripture. The first is O Sapientia, still marked in the Calendar of the Prayer Book.

The Invitatories, which are closely allied in their nature to anthems, have been often taken from S. and Q. But I do not know whence Cranmer obtained the Invitatories for Advent,⁶ Christmas,⁷ or Corpus Christi.⁸ Possibly they may have been of his own composition.

INVOCATION OF THE SAINTS.

It may be noted that both Calendars contain the names of Saints, yet no distinct offices are appointed for their days in either of the two Parts. There are no particular collects for the Saints' days, nor hymns. The lessons from Holy Scripture do not vary on Saints' days in either Calendar, though in that following the Second Part the lessons for some immovable feasts of Our Lord, Christmas, Circumcision, and Epiphany, and the Saints immediately following Christmas seem to have no lessons assigned them.¹ But this is more apparent than real; for on the days of these feasts there are lessons from Holy Scripture assigned.²

At Prime in Part the Second, in a collect addressed to the Most Holy Trinity, it is asked that St. Mary and all the Saints and elect of God may pray for us.³ The collect has been altered, though the prayer for the intercession of the Saints still remains.

On the other hand, in one or two cases it might seem that prayer to Almighty God for the protection of the Saints is discouraged. The collect for Sexagesima in Part the Second has been exchanged for another,⁴ apparently to avoid asking for the protection of the Doctor of the Gentiles.

PRAYERS FOR THE FAITHFUL DEPARTED.

Hardly anything in the manuscript can be found of the practice of praying for the rest and peace of the faithful departed. Fidelium animae, which Q. had retained at the end of the Hours, is left out. All Souls has disappeared from November 2 of the Calendar that follows the Second Part. In the Calendar of the First Part, Cranmer has shown his usual vacillation. First, Omnes S. defuncti has been entered on November 1. Then Memoria animarum has been inserted on November 2, and sancti written over the first entry on November 1. The Quarta lectio in November for *Omnes sancti defuncti*⁵ is merely the Epistle in the Sarum Mass for the Dead, I Thess. iv. 13-18, in the version of Erasmus, and the same passage was read as the Epistle in I. of Edward VI. "at the Holy Communion when there is a burial of the dead."

THE VENERATION OF THE CROSS.

The sign of the Cross appears nowhere recommended in the manuscript. It is not to be found at the opening of the Second Part, at the versicle Domine labia, which is the beginning of Mattins, and where the sign of the Cross is in many breviaries ordered to be made. It is so ordered in Q.

⁴ See below, p. 124, l. 12.

It may be noticed that Cranmer has retained in the First Part the stanzas in Vexilla Regis prodeunt which imply a veneration of the Holy Cross ; but not in the Second. He has inserted in the Calendar of the First Part, after it was drawn up, the commemoration of the Invention of the Cross on May 3. Neither feast of the Cross appeared in the Final Calendar after Part II. This may give some help to the thought that the First Part was written before Cranmer's proposal in 1546 that outward signs of respect to the Cross should be forbidden by the Royal authority.¹

Patribus institutam si quis diligenter exquirat et examinet, eam sane nec inepte nec incommode ordinatam fuisse com-periet, Illi siquidem tali modo rem disposuerant, ut singulis 10 annis omnia sacra biblia perlegerentur, et vna cum anni circulo canonice quoque scripture circulus reuelueretur, Volentes nimirum vti clerici et ecclesiarum antistites assidua sacrarum literarum lectione meditacioneque et ipsi ad arduam virtutis viam capescendam incitarentur et alios exhortandi in 15 doctrina sana, convincendique eos qui contradicunt facultatem sibi compararent, et Plebes auditis quotidie in cetu sacro, sacris diuini verbi lectionibus indies magis ac magis in rerum diuinuarum cognitione proficerent ac in deum pietate accen-derentur/ Sed proh dolor) illam maiorum/ tam sanctam/ tam

Durum est tibi contra stimulos calcitrare. Is tremens ac stupens dixit, Domine quid me vis facere? Et Dominus ad

APPENDIX.

[These four columns represent four stages of developement in one document. In the first column is the prefatory letter of Cardinal Quignon to Paul III. contained in the first text of his breviary of 1535 ; in the second column, that of the second text of the breviary of 1536 ; in the third column, that of the preface to the work now edited ; in the fourth, the Preface concerning the service of the Church prefixed to the First book of Edward the Sixth, well known to the present generation as forming, with some alterations, one part of the prefatory matter to the Book of Common Prayer.

The symbols at the head of each column represent :

Q^1 =The First Recension of Quignon's Breviary. (See Breviarium Romanum a Francisco Cardinali Quignonio editum et recognitum, Cantabrigiae, 1888, p. xix.)

Q^2 =The second recension of the Quignon Breviary, Henry Bradshaw Society, 1908, p. xxiii.

Cranmer=The present volume, now edited, p. 15.

i. of Edward VI.=Facsimile of Whitchurche's edition, 1549, mense Martii. Shelf mark in the British Museum: C. 25. l. 14. (1.).

Three of these prefaces, Q^2 , Cranmer, and i of Edward VI., are printed without abbreviation or change in the order in which they appear in the editions. But it has not been easy to fit some paragraphs of Q^1 into the places opposite the paragraphs to which they are similar without removing them from the places in which they appear in Q^1 . The change is marked in a footnote in each case. Two sections of Q^1 have not been reprinted.]

Breviarium Romanum nuper
a nobis felicis recordationis Clementis .VII. Pontificis Maximi hortatu confectum,
ac potius in ampliorem sacrarum scripturarum lectionem, ad veterem sanctorum patrum, et Conciliarum antiquorum formam reuocatum, tuaqu voluntate sanctissime Pater editum, graues plerosque ac doctos viros ita probasse et recepisse intellexi, vt nihil in eo mutandum existi-marent. Alios item animaduerti graues etiam, et prudentes homines, qui eius rationem magnopere probantes, nonnihil tamen in eo desyderari affirmarent. Illud vero nunquam dubitaui fore in tanta multitu-dine nonnullos ex iis videlicet qui in diuerso precandi ritu con-sensuerint, quibus labor ille noster non esset perinde gratus, existimantibus ab inueterata illa consuetudine precandi nulla ratione clericis esse disceden-dum. Imovero nobis primam editionem breviarij non tanquam promulgationem legis esse placuerat, sed quasi publicam quandam deliberationem, vt sic proposita nostra sententia, iudicia multorum exquireremus, et quod omnium commodissimum et religioni ac pietati conuenientissimum plerisque prudentibus grauibusque viris visum esset sequeremur.

Nihil enim humano elabora-tum ingenio tam exactum initio vnquam fuit quin postea multorum accidente iudicio per-fectius redi possit, vt in ipsis etiam ecclesiasticis institutis circa primituam præsertim ecclesiæ contigisse videmus.

tanta cautione excogitatum fuit, aut tanta firmitate stabilitum, quod vetustate et temporum lapsu non corrumperetur. Hoc 45 et in precibus illis quas horarias venisse conspicimus.

There was neuer anything by the wit of man so well deuised, or so surely established, which appere by the common prayers in the Chur[c]he, commonlye

Cogitanti mihi pater sanctissime atque animo repetenti initia veteris instituti, quo sancitum est, vt clerici sacris iniciati, vel sacerdotiis præsidentes singulis diebus perlegant horarias preces, quas canonicas etiam appellamus, tres omnino causæ spectatæ fuisse videri solent.

30

Quarum ea prima est, quod cum cæteri homines in quaque ciuitate aut suum quisque negotium agant, aut in Republica administranda sint occupati, clericis ex eo vocatis, vt Hieronymus testatur, quod de sorte domini sint, quique bonis ecclesiasticis aluntur, hoc potissimum negotium diuinis, et humanis legibus est iniunctum, vt in commissum sibi populum, ac de se bene merentem Deum propitium habere cunctis rationibus enitantur. Quod non solum sacrificijs efficitur, sed etiam precibus, quæ a pio corde profiscantur,

Q¹.Q²

Itaque multorum sententijs collatis, quæ nobis partim vocibus, partim scriptis innotuerunt, iudicium eorum secuti qui omnium prudentissime sentire visi sunt, libenter quædam addidimus, alia mutauimus, et omnia diligenter recognouimus, retenta tamen summa forma breuiarii. Sed quoniam sic fert natura rerum, vt nihil sit tam rectum, nihil tanta ratione in vitam usumque hominum inductum, cuius nouitas non sit aliquibus ingrata, non temere facturi esse videmur, si rationem totius instituti nostri a nobis prius summarim redditam, nunc accuratius recognito breuiario, paulo latius explicabimus.

Mihi enim (vt sæpe sum professus) cogitanti, atque animo repetenti initia veteris instituti, quo sancitum est, vt clerici sacris iniciati, vel sacerdotiis præsidentes, singulis diebus perlegant horarias preces, quas canonicas etiam appellamus, tres praecipue causæ spectatæ fuisse videri solent.

Quarum ea prima est, quod quum ceteri homines in quaque ciuitate, aut suum quisque negotium agunt, aut in republica administranda sint occupati, clericis ex eo vocatis quod sortis domini sint, quique bonis ecclesiasticis aluntur, hoc potissimum negotium diuinis et humanis legibus est iniunctum, vt Deum habere propitium in commissum sibi populum, ac de se bene merentem cunctis rationibus enitantur: quod non solum sacrificijs efficitur, sed etiam precibus, quæ a pio corde profiscantur.

NOTES.

NOTES TO THE FIRST PART.

IANUARIUS.

Psalmorum Senarii. This heading for the psalms runs through every month of the Calendar in Part I. Senarius signifies a group of six ; each day therefore is to have six psalms assigned to it, doubtless after the manner indicated on p. 18 above, l. 34 : which of the two schemes was to be followed is not certain. It would seem more likely that the one which does not include the canticles and which is due to Cranmer's additions and corrections is that intended to be used.

It will be noticed that this plan is different from that in I. of Edward VI. which has no fixed number of psalms for each day of the month ; but it is precisely like the First Book in its arrangement of the recitation of the Psalter in February, for both plans have the psalms divided into thirty portions, and the portion of the psalms for the first day of the month is said on January 31, the following 28 portions on the 28 days of February, and the portion for the thirtieth day is said on March 1. When the months have 31 days, the thirtieth portion is recited again on the thirty-first day, and this same scheme was followed in the first Edwardine book, as may be seen by looking in its Calendar, and on the rubrics printed on the page before the Calendar. When there is an overplus of days in the month, much the same plan of repeating at Mattins the psalms of the day before was followed by the Humiliates in 1548.

In this month the final e of pridie has been added within square brackets ; but in the other months the manuscript has been followed, and the e left out.

Jan. 2. Abel: It might be thought that Abel is commemorated here because Jan. 2 is the octave of St. Stephen. It rather appears to be caused by the reading at Evensong of the Chapter of Genesis (ch. iv.) which describes the slaying of Abel by Cain. There is, however, a special lesson (see above, p. 49.) for Abel. It may be noted that the Copts commemorate Abel on Jan. 2. (N. Nilles, Kalendarium Manuale, Oeniponte, Rauch, 1896. t. ii. p. 713.) and in Syon a number of Old Testament saints, including Abel, are commemorated in the Addiccyons to January 23. Petrus de Natalibus (Catalogus Sanctorum, Venetiis, Giunta, 1506. lib. iii. capp. ii-xii.) commemorates a number of persons spoken of in Genesis.

As on other days of the month, the commemoration of Abraham and Sara (Jan. 7 and 9) is determined by the lesson to be read from Genesis. And again the names of Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph are placed opposite the chapters of Genesis in which part of their history is set forth. In other months the names of some of the persons spoken of in the New Testament have been inserted opposite the chapters in which they are named, and in some cases a fourth lesson for these saints was to have been composed, apparently on the lines of that of Abel. No cause could be suggested for these entries in the Calendar so long as we had not the tables of lessons to guide us. Their appearance seemed rather a grotesque sort of newfangledness.

The first lesson for the Vespers of this day is marked in the manuscript with a cypher like an imperfect 7. It should have been 4.

24. Though scored through, Babylas has a lesson. See above, p. 56. This is part of the evidence that the Sanctuarium was written before the alterations in the Calendar were made by Cranmer.

The idea of commemorating this saint was not taken from Sarum or Quignon. He appears in the Bosworth Psalter, which belonged to Cranmer, and in the York Breviary. He is also in the Mozarabic Calendar of Cardinal Ximenes: and at Drontheim, which last is the only instance in the collection of pre-Reformation Calendars of Mr. W. H. J. Weale. (Analecta Liturgica, Insulis et Brugis, 1889. p. 111.) Of German dioceses, H. Grotewold (Zeitrechnung des deutschen Mittelalters, Hannover, Hahn, 1891.) gives only Augsburg and Breslau. Erasmus mentions both Babylas and the Forty Martyrs, the former celebrated by St. John Chrysostom, the latter by St. Basil. (Ecclesiastae Lib. iii. in Opera omnia, Lugd. Batav. Vander Aa, 1704. t. v. col. 953.) Cranmer would no doubt have read Erasmus.

25. The Conversion of St. Paul has been entered on January 24, then scored through; and again entered on January 25. Then all scored out by some blundering; stet is added in front of the insertion. The day has a lesson in the Sanctuarium. (p. 57 above.)

26. Ananias who baptized St. Paul is commemorated in the Martyrologies on January 25. The Greeks commemorate Ananias on October 1. (Hippolyte Delehaye, Propylaeum ad Acta Sanctorum Novembris, Bruxellis, Bolland. 1902. col. 95.)

P. 4.

FEBRUARIUS.

7. Adauctus may have been suggested by Q.

10. Vidua paupercula is spoken of in the third lesson at Mattins, Mark xii. 41-44.

16. Julitta is commemorated by St. Basil in a homily. (Migne, P.G. xxxi. 238.) A Juliana was remembered on this day in S. Q.² York, and many other churches.

17. This Simeon is the author of Nunc dimittis, appearing here because Luke ii. 25, where he is named, is in the third lesson. The Simeon in S. and Q.¹ on the 18th is the bishop of Jerusalem, who succeeded St. James, "the brother of the Lord."

21. This Benjamin is not the son of Israel, and brother of Joseph, but a deacon and martyr commemorated in the Reformed Martyrologies on March 31. He has a lesson, which makes this clear. (See above, p. 66.)

P. 5.

MARTIUS.

3. Maurinus and Asterius are in S. Asterius alone in Q¹.

7. Perpetua and Felicitas are in S. and the Martyrologies; but are displaced in Q. by St. Thomas of Aquinum.

8. Zachaeus appears in the third lesson, Luke xix. 1-10.

9. St. Basil devotes Homilia xix. (Migne, P.G. xxxi. 507.) to the Forty Martyrs. See above, lesson on p. 69. They are in S. and Q. and may be found in many Calendars and Martyrologies on the 9th or about this day. Following the second Calendar (p. 156. above) they were first entered on March 4, but then scored through and entered at a more usual place.

12. The good thief is spoken of in the third lesson, Luke xxiii. 39-43. He is commemorated in Ado and the Roman Martyrology on March 25.

14. Phinehas comes in the first lesson of Evensong.
 18. Edward King and Martyr is an English saint, not in Q. but in S. There was to have been a fourth lesson. (See above, p. 71.) The name appears in the Mozarabic Calendar of Cardinal Ximenes. Outside England this saint rarely or never appears. Neither Weale nor Grotewell registers an instance.
 19. This is the foster father of our Lord. He is in S. and Q. and the Martyrologies, on this day.

P. 6.

APRILIS.

1. Joseph of Arimathea appears here because he is spoken of in the third lesson, John xix. 38. There was also to have been a fourth lesson. (See above, p. 71.) It may be noted that at Syon he was remembered on March 27 and in the Reformed Roman Martyrology on March 17.

2. Keeping the Visitation on this day may be a borrowing from the York books. In 1513 York Convocation resolved to keep the Visitation on the fourth of the nones of April. (See Breviarium Eboracense, 1526. and 1533, Paris.) It seems more reasonable to keep the Visitation before the Nativity of St. John the Baptist than after. Usuard under April 2 has: Maria exurgens abit in montana.

4. It is nothing new for St. Ambrose to be set in a Calendar on the day of his death. The predominant number of English Calendars commemorate him on April 4.

7. Epiphanius, a bishop in Africa, and thirteen other persons martyred with him are commemorated on this day in the Martyrologies. He does not appear in S. or Q.

11. Leo primus is not in S. or Y. but he is commemorated on this day in Q. Leo junior is to be found, as the lessons show, in S. and Y. on June 28. Cranmer seems at first to have placed a Leo on June 28 and then to have struck him out. See note below, June 28.

13. Justin Martyr may have been suggested by Q. He is not in S. In many German Calendars he appears about August 4. The Martyrologies remember him on April 13. See note below, June 1.

16. In Usuard and Syon there is a Cassian included in a group of many others on this day. It is hard to say which of the Cassians in the Martyrologies is intended.

22. In the middle ages, I am told, Delbora was no very unfrequent way of spelling Deborah.

P. 7.

MAIUS.

8. The centurion is most likely entered on this day by mistake for the 9th, on which day Matt. viii. is read.

13. David Rex appears here, as the slaying of Goliath is read in the first lesson at Mattins; but I am wholly unable to account for the appearance of Cornelius on this day unless it be a mistake, for which its scoring out may offer some likelihood.

P. 8.

IUNIUS.

1. There is a Justin, with companions, commemorated by the Greeks on June 1. (Hippolyte Delehaye, Propylaeum ad Acta Sanctorum Novembris, Bruxellis, Bollandists, 1902. col. 721.) but he is in all likelihood one with Justin Martyr, the philosopher, also kept on the same day. Acting apparently upon some Eastern authority, Cranmer has begun by placing Justin Martyr on June 1. and then has scored the name through, either remembering that he had already placed Justin Martyr on April 13, or else then proceeding to place Justin on the Western day. His action is like that with the Visitation of B.M.V. He had not made up his mind. Cf. Leo I. on June 28.

4. Amorrousa: the word αιμορροῦσα is not used by St. Mark, as it is by St. Matthew ix. 20.

26. Ezechias is the King of Judah whom we commonly call Hezekiah ; but the first mention of him in the 2nd book of the Kings is in the 18th chapter, not the 19th.

28. This commemoration of Leo I. is struck out : Leo I. appears on April 11. Compare St. Justin Martyr above.

P. 9.

IULIUS.

2. After some hesitation, Cranmer seems to have chosen the 2nd of July rather than the second of April for the Visitation. Petrus and Dorotheus have a lesson evidently for July (see above, p. 90.) and they may have been suggested by Quignon, though in Q¹ they are on Sept. 9, in Q² on Sept. 16. Dorotheus is on the 9th of September in the Martyrologies. Petrus seems a borrowing from Eusebius.

9. Cyrillus was to have had a lesson (see above, p. 93.) and in default of this, it is doubtful which Cyril is to be remembered. On this day the Martyrologies commemorate a martyred Cyril, bishop in Crete.

27. Septem Fratres Dormientes. (Simeon Metaphrastes, Migne, P.G. cxv. 427.) They are in S. but not in Q.

P. 10.

AUGUSTUS.

13. It can hardly be doubted that the Cornelius here entered is the centurion of Acts x. The Hippolytus is the martyr of Ado and Usuard : he is in S. but not in Q.

30. Felix and Adauctus have been altered to the day on which they are kept in S. and Q².

P. 11.

SEPTEMBER.

1. St. Mamas, the shepherd (H. Delehaye, Propylaeum ad Acta Sanctorum Novembris, Bruxellis, Bollandist, 1902. col. 5.) is counted by the Easterns one of the great martyrs, and is commemorated on the second of September, while among the Westerns his day falls on August 17. His commemoration may very likely be due to the homily upon him to be found in St. Basil. Homilia xxiii. (Migne, P.G. xxxi. 589.) St. Gregory Naz. Homilia xlvi. in sanctum Pascha, xii. (Migne, P.G. xxxvi. 619.) See Smith and Wace, Dictionary of Christian Biography, John Murray, 1882. under Mamas. He is not very often to be found in pre-Reformation Calendars. Mr. W. H. J. Weale (Analecta Liturgica, Insulis et Brugis, 1889. pp. 202, 122.) gives only Lyons and Langres : H. Grotewald (Zeitrechnung des deutschen Mittelalters, Hannover, Hahn, 1891, Heiligen-Verzeichniss, p. 133.) gives Metz and Toul as churches where he is commemorated on August 17. In the Mozarabic he is on the 7th of August.

9. See above, note on July 2, touching Petrus, Dorotheus, etc. Gorgonius has a memoria tantum in S. Y. The Martyrologies associate him with Dorotheus.

29. The commemoration of all angels with St. Michael is rare before the Reformation, but it does occur. It is not found in S. Y. or Q. but Michaelis et omnium angelorum may be found at Langres (Missale ad usum Ecclesie Lingonensis, Paris, 1492?) in the Calendar ; but omnium angelorum is not in the Sanctorale. At Hildesheim (Missale Hildensemse, Nuremberg, 1511.) Michaelis et omnium angelorum is found both in the Calendar and Sanctorale : at Halberstadt (Canonicarum horarum liber secundum ordinem Rubrice Ecclesie Halberstaden. Nuremberg, 1515.) the same : in the Sanctorale, not in the Calendar, of the Missale Carthusiense of 1541.

Cranmer, in his visits to Germany may have noticed the addition to Michael in the German books, and liked it.

30. The story of the chaste Susannah is in the thirteenth chapter of Daniel, Vulgate.

P. 12.

OCTOBER.

6. Policarpus is moved up to January, probably to the 26th of that month. His place in October is taken from the second Calendar (see above, p. 163).

I have been unable to find any Calendar or Martyrology that places St. Polycarp on Oct. 6. The martyrdom (Eusebius, Hist. Eccles. IV. xv. in Migne, P.G. xx. 348.) took place on or near Easter Even, thus in the spring, not in the autumn. Whence the authority for the statement on l. 25 on p. 105 above is derived I do not know. It is possibly a repetition of the last line in Q's lesson.

P. 13.

NOVEMBER.

1. All Saints is turned into all holy souls, but not so in the second Calendar (see above, p. 164).

4. Micheas is the prophet begun to be read on this day. Vitalis and Agricola are two martyrs, not in S. Y. or Q. They are in the Martyrologies on this day, and St. Ambrose speaks of them in his Exhortatio Virginitatis, cap. i. (Migne, P.L. xvi. 335.) The suggestion most likely comes from Witzel, fo. cxxxix. who has a life of these two saints from St. Ambrose.

P. 14.

DECEMBER.

18. Lazarus, the brother of Mary and Martha, is commemorated in the Martyrologies and some Calendars on the 17th.

P. 15.

PREFATIO.

This preface has been reproduced in parallel columns with those of Q¹, Q², and the I. of Edward VI. in an Appendix ; see above, p. 167. In taking Q¹ as a basis for the preface to his own scheme Cranmer has shown some judgement ; for the Quignonian Preface has been much praised by several recognised authorities. See the Second Recension of the Quignon Breviary, Henry Bradshaw Society, 1912. vol. ii. pp. 31 and 220.

P. 16. l. 18. When Venite itself was omitted (see above, p. 20. l. 34.) it was superfluous to remark that Invitatories were to be abolished. Q¹ says that he omits anthems and responds (see above, p. 182. l. 29.) but not invitatories which were retained in both texts.

P. 17. l. 12. There is no mention of Lincoln Use here, though it is introduced into the prefatory matter of I. of Edward VI. (See above, p. 195. l. 26.) It has been thought that the Use of Lincoln never existed, like the Use of Bangor ; but Mr. Christopher Wordsworth has found mention (Chapter Acts, C. primus 118^b.) of a request in 1435 to a Bishop of Lincoln, W. Gray, to restore to the chapter unum portiforium de usu Lincoln. There is other evidence in Mr. Wordsworth's possession besides this. And in the chapel of Wakebridge in 1368 there was a manual "de usu Lincolnie." (J. Charles Cox, Notes on the Churches of Derbyshire, Chesterfield and London, Bemrose, 1878, vol. iv. p. 65.) Thus there would seem to have existed a something which they called the Use of Lincoln.

l. 14. The coming uniformity is perhaps hinted at in a measure earlier than the date of this preface. Thus :

And wee have juged it to bee of no smal force, for the avoiding of strife and contencion, to have one uniforme maner or course of praiyng throughout all our dominions ; and a veraie greate efficacie it hath to stirre up the ferventenesse of the minde, if the confuse maner of praiyng bee somewhat holpen with the feloship or annexion of understanding. (Henry VIII.'s preface to his primer. D. Wilkins, Concilia, London, 1737, t. iii. p. 874.)

P. 18. For this page, compare the note on p. 3.

P. 19. CANON DIVINORUM OFFICIORUM.

l. 2. The remainder of this paragraph has been so much altered by Cranmer that it has been thought well for the convenience of the reader to represent both states in parallel columns in the Introduction. (See above, p. liv.)

l. 23. This is plainly an allusion to the preceding Calendar of Part I. At Mattins there are always to be three lessons at least, and on the saints' days, for which a fourth lesson is prepared, four.

l. 29. All the books of the Old Testament from Genesis to Maccabees are read without omitting a single chapter. The division into two of the long chapters is most marked in December when dealing with the first book of the Maccabees. In the rest of the books of the Old Testament the division of the chapters occurs only here and there, as on March 15, the 4, 12, 13, 14, and 25 of April, 1, 13, 30 of May, 13, 14, 16 of June, 2, 16 of July, 15, 17 of August. Every book is read entire, including 3 and 4 of Esdras.

P. 20. l. 2. The prophets and the book of the Revelation are read entire, as are the other books of the Old Testament ; but the divisions into two of the longer chapters of the prophets are far more marked, and they may well run into 85 in number.

l. 11. The chapter which Cranmer has divided into two is the 15 of the first of Corinthians, and this is exactly as he says ; it is not divided on January 31, when the whole is read, but on 1 and 2 of June, and 1 and 2 of October it is divided.

l. 14. The Gospels and Acts are to be read in the morning service, just as the Epistles are in the evening, and thus both series are read three times every year. It may be noticed that this disposition of the Gospels and Acts in the morning and the Epistles in the evening passed into I. of Edward VI. and remained in use in the Book of Common Prayer till after 1870, and thus Gospels and Epistles were read three times in every year. The chapters so long that they had to be divided into two appear to be Matthew 13, Luke 1, 8, 9, and John 6. They may be found in the Calendar on February 16, 17, 24, 25, 26, and 27 ; on June 18, 24, 25, 26, and 27 ; September 13 and 14 ; October 16, 17, 24, 25, 26, 27 ; and November 17 and 18.

l. 22. In leap year, the service of the 24th of February is to be repeated on the 25th.

l. 30. If the Lord's Prayer were to be said aloud in the mother tongue, was the rest of the service also to be said in English? It does not seem likely. It is true that the Lord's Prayer before the Lessons, and the Lessons were to be in English. The opening versicles are quite in accordance with tradition.

l. 34. The omission of Venite is a great break with universal tradition ; but this invitational psalm was restored in I. of Edward VI.

l. 35. The hymn after Venite disappeared with the rest of the hymns in I. of Edward VI.

l. 36. Traces of the arrangement of the Psalter in groups of three psalms may be perceived in the table of I. of Edward VI. Out of the sixty groups of psalms nearly one half are in divisions of threes, and the proper psalms with the exception of those for the evening of Good Friday and for Whitsunday are also in threes.

P. 21. l. 2. The three lessons are to be read without any interval or singing, such as a respond; then Te Deum; and last the fourth lesson. There was to have been a fourth lesson for Sundays as well as holidays, but the choice of those proper for Sundays and the Greater Feasts has not come down to us, if ever made. This section was to be omitted on occasion. (See p. 23. l. 17.)

l. 13. This respond to Tu autem appears to be Cranmer's own, like that on p. 115. l. 30.

l. 14. The lessons were to be read outside the quire and in the vulgar tongue, so that according to the prescription of St. Paul the people might answer Amen.

l. 21. Deo gratias is the respond in S. and many other breviaries. Laudemus et superexalteamus is from the last verse but one of Benedicite said at Lauds on Sunday in S. and Q.

l. 24. Quicunque vult is not to be said daily as in Sarum, but only on Sundays, as in Q. In Part II. p. 117. l. 12 it is said on Sundays and feast days.

ll. 26-39. Preces as in S. (II. 53) at Prime.

l. 36. For nostram, S. has meam, and in l. 37, meus not noster. The rest of the Preces being in the plural, Cranmer has been consistent, and made these two lines to agree in number with the others.

l. 41. Domine Sancte Pater : S. (II. 54) collect at Prime.

l. 44. Read incurramus in place of inclinamus.

P. 22. l. 5. Here the usual Benedicamus has been altered. The Holy Trinity is not mentioned, and nomen eius appears in place of eum.

l. 9. As in the morning service on p. 20. l. 10. From p. 20. l. 32, it is plain that Alleluia should be inserted here if the precedent of the morning service is to be followed.

l. 20. The services, from being seven or eight in number, had in practice, by what is called accumulation, been reduced to two a day.

l. 25. This rubric forbids the use of any other offices than those which have just been set forth.

P. 23. l. 17. Te Deum, and the fourth lesson with Quicunque vult, were to be omitted if the service were likely to be so long as to fatigue the people, or to interfere with preaching.

l. 25. Can it be that Cranmer is himself the author of these Benedictions?

P. 24.

HYMNI.

l. 4. Primo dierum : S. (II. 5.) hymn for Sunday Mattins from Epiphany to Lent. Blume. (li. 24.) C. (6.)

l. 14. Et expiatos : C. but S. has : Ut. Blume reads Et hic piatos, but the majority reads : Et expiatos.

l. 26. Per quod avernis : C. has : Per quod averni. S. has : Per quem averni. Blume prefers : Per quam.

P. 25. l. 2. Christe q. lux es: S. (II. 228.) hymn for Compline in Lent up to Passion Sunday. Blume (li. 21.) C. (25 b.)

l. 27. Immense Celi conditor: S. (II. 198.) hymn for Monday at Vespers from Epiphany to Lent. Blume (II. 35.) C. (8 b.)

P. 26. l. 10. Te lucis ante terminum: S. (II. 224.) Compline i.

l. 13. Ac custodia: C. (5 b.) Et custodia: Modern Roman Breviary. Ad custodiam: S. (II. 224.) Y. So Blume. (li. 42.)

l. 23. Telluris ingens conditor: S. (II. 201.) hymn on Tuesday at Vespers. Blume (li. 36.) C. (9 b.)

l. 32. Virore gratiae: C. also Modern Roman Breviary, and many MSS. Vivoris gratia: S.

P. 27. l. 2. Jesu salvator: S. (II. 234.) hymn at Easter Compline. Blume (li. 43.) C. (37. b.)

l. 10. This stanza takes the place of the fourth in S. Y. But in C. and Blume the order is as in the text, and there are only four stanzas, as it is not necessarily a paschal hymn.

l. 19. Celi deus sanctissime: S. (II. 204.) hymn on Wednesday at Vespers. Blume (li. 36.) C. (10 b.)

l. 25. ministras ordini: C. ministrans ordini: S. Y. Blume. Modern Roman Breviary has ministras ordinem.

l. 28. Direptionis: S. Y. Diremptionis: C. Blume. So Modern Roman Breviary.

l. 30. daret: C. Y.(S). dares: S. Y. Blume. So Modern Roman Breviary.

P. 28. l. 2. Deus creator omnium: S. (II. 220.) hymn on Saturday at Vespers from Epiphany to Lent. C. (14.) G. M. Dreves, Aurelius Ambrosius, Freiburg i. B. 1893, p. 132.

l. 10. grates: S. C. Dreves.

l. 18. profunda: C. Y.(G.) Dreves. profundo: S.

l. 28. Ne: S. C. but Dreves reads Nec.

l. 31. patrisque: S. C.

P. 29. l. 2. Magne deus potentie: S. (II. 209.) hymn for Vespers on Thursday. Blume (li. 37.) C. (11 b.)

l. 6. Demersa: S. Irrogans: Blume.

l. 7. Subvecta: S. C.

l. 19. Lucis Creator optime: S. (II. 195.) hymn for Sunday Vespers in ferial time. Blume (li. 34.) C. (5.)

l. 23. This stanza is the third in S. and C. and others. It is clearly out of its place in the text, for l. 30 is an introduction to l. 23.

P. 30. l. 2. Plasmator hominis deus: S. (II. 214.) hymn for Friday at Vespers. Blume (li. 38.) C. (12 b.)

l. 19. O Pater summe: This hymn is in C. (14 b.) but not in S. or Y. for it was written by Clichtoveus as a paraphrase upon O pater sancte mitis atque pie, a hymn sung at Sarum at lauds on Trinity Sunday. (I. mliv.) See Introduction, p. lxvi. Clichtoveus has deitatis in line 19 and deitate in line 23.

P. 31. l. 2. Jam lucis orto sidere: S. (II. 37.) hymn at Prime. Blume (li. 40.) C. (3 b.)

l. 23. O lux beata: S. (II. 221.) hymn sung at Saturday Vespers from Pentecost to Advent. Blume (li. 38.) C. (13 b.)

P. 32. l. 5. Christe redemptor omnium: S. (I. clxxi.) hymn for mattins on Christmas Day. Blume (li. 49.) C. (17.) For omnium there is gentium in C. omnium in S. Blume.

- l. 6. Ex : S. Y. Blume. De : in C.
 l. 9. Tu splendor : S. Y. Blume. et splendor : C.
 l. 17. Hic : S. Y. Sic : C. Hic is the reading of all the sources, except five, according to Blume.
 l. 24. Laudans exultat : C. and three manuscripts. Laudat exultans : S. Y. Blume.
 l. 30. Agnoscat omne seculum : Y. hymn at Prime at Christmas but only the two first stanzas appear. It would seem therefore that the text has been taken from C. (17 b.) See Dreves (l. 85.)

- P. 33. l. 1. cecinit : C. precinit : Y. Dreves.
 l. 5. concepit : C. Almost all the sources have concepit, says Dreves.
 l. 10. virga : C. Dreves.
 l. 34. Cultor dei memento : S. (II. 230.) hymn at Compline from Passion Sunday to Maundy Thursday. Dreves (l. 29.) C. (29.)

- P. 34. l. 18. Hic Christus est : C. Dreves ; while S. has Christus hic.
 l. 22. paulum : S. C.
 l. 24. Meditabitur : S. Meditabimur : C. Dreves.
 l. 26. Vexilla regis prodeunt : S. (I. dcccxxiiii.) hymn at Vespers from Passion Sunday to Maundy Thursday. Dreves (l. 74.) C. (30.)

- l. 35. diro : Y. Dreves : dirae : S. C.
P. 35. l. 3. Dicendo nationibus : S. Dreves. Dicens in nationibus : C.
 l. 5. The stanzas beginning Arbor decora, Beata cuius, and O crux ave are retained here in Part I. while in Part II. (p. 158.) they do not appear. It is doubted if they be as ancient as the rest of the hymn.
 l. 13. Dreves gives another stanza in place of O Crux, and the following stanza is also different.
 l. 25. Magno salutis gaudio : not in S. or Y., but it appears in C. (32.) and Blume (l. 73.) as a hymn for Palm Sunday. Blume reads : Magnum salutis gaudium.
 l. 31. pie : C. Blume. There appears no manuscript authority for pium.

- P. 36. l. 4. Dignatur : C. Blume.
 l. 7. processit : C. Blume.
 l. 15. Hymnum dicamus domino : This hymn is not in S. Y. but it is in C. (33. b.) as a hymn for Passontide. Blume (l. 76.) assigns it to Maundy Thursday.

- P. 37. l. 12. Aurora lucis rutilat : S. (I. dcccclviii.) hymn at Mattins in Eastertide, from Low Sunday to Ascension. Blume (l. 89.) C. (35. b.)
 l. 27. Resplendens : C. S. Y. There appears to be no manuscript authority for Respondens, according to Blume.
 l. 32. Sermone blando begins a separate hymn in S. Y., but runs on in C. and Blume.
 l. 34. Galileam : S. Galilaea : C. Y. So also Blume.

- P. 38. l. 1. Ille : S. C. Blume.
 l. 4. Blume has osculant.
 l. 26. Chorus nove Hierusalem : S. (I. dcccclv.) hymn at Saturday Vespers in Eastertide from Low Sunday to Holy Thursday. Dreves (l. 285.) C. (36. b.)
 l. 33. A morte functos : S. Y. C. Dreves.
 l. 35. refundit : Dreves.

- P. 39. l. 18. Festum nunc celebre : this hymn is not in S. or V. It is in C. (38. b.) and Dreves (l. 192.) as hymn for Ascensiontide.

l. 31. protegens : Dreves.

CRANMER.

P. 40. l. 6. Eterne rex altissime : S. (I. dcccclviii.) hymn at Vespers and Mattins in Ascensiontide. Blume (li. 94.) C. (39 b.)

l. 17. Flectant : S. C. Flectat : Blume.

l. 22. Tu Christe : C. Blume. Tu esto : S. In this and the two following stanzas the text agrees with C. and Blume. S. has one stanza only, quite different except in first line.

l. 35. Qui scandis supra sidera : S. Y. Qui scandis super sidera : Blume ; while C. has the line as in text.

P. 41. l. 5. Veni Creator spiritus : S. (I. mviii.) hymn at Terce at Whitsuntide. Dreves (l. 193.)

l. 34. Iam Christus astra ascenderat : S. (I. mi.) hymn at first Vespers, and Mattins, at Pentecost. Blume (li. 98.) C. (41.)

l. 36. Promisso : S. Blume. Promissum : C. and three MSS.

P. 42. l. 5. Cum : Blume.

l. 9. nuntians : Blume.

l. 10. Decorus ignis advenit : C. Decorus ignis almus est : S. Y. Blume.

l. 12. compleat : C. Blume. complevit : S. concremat : Y.

l. 13. Sarum and York begin a fresh hymn here : Impleta gaudeni viscera : S. hymn for lauds at Pentecost (I. mvii.)

l. 16. Fantur : S. Y. C. Blume.

l. 17. cogitur : Blume.

l. 20. omnium : S. Blume. omnibus : C.

l. 22. Vesana : Blume.

l. 28. Ioele teste comprobans : Blume.

P. 43.

ORATIONES.

The text of these collects may be either from Q. or S. The distribution of them is according to neither until Whitsuntide be reached.

l. 3. Excita : S. (I. cxxxiii.) The collect for the fourth Sunday in Advent.

l. 9. Concede : S. (I. cxc.) Collect for third mass and lauds of Christmas.

l. 13. Ds. q. nos in tantis : S. (I. ccclv.) Collect for fourth Sunday after the octaves of the Epiphany.

l. 18. Ds. q. conspicis quia : S. (I. dxiii.) Collect for Sexagesima ; tua being substituted for doctoris gentium ; the latter expression is also found in Q. See note on p. 124. l. 12.

l. 22. Ds. q. conspicis omni : S. (I. dcxxiv.) Collect for second Sunday in Lent.

l. 27. Ops. semp. Ds. q. humano genere : S. (I. dccl.) Collect for Palm Sunday.

l. 30. ipsius habere documenta et resurrectionis consortia mereamur : S. Y. Here may be noted the first substitution of the word valeamus for mereamur.

P. 44. l. 2. Ds. q. hodierna die per unigenitum : S. (I. dcccixv.) Collect for Easter Day.

l. 7. Ds. a quo : S. Collect for Rogation Sunday.

l. 11. Concede qs. ops. Ds. ut q. hodierno : S. (I. dcccclxiii.) Collect for Holy Thursday.

l. 16. Ds. q. hodierna die corda fidelium : S. (I. mviii.) Collect for Pentecost.

l. 21. Ops. semp. Ds. q. dedisti famulis : S. (I. mxlvii.) For Trinity Sunday.

l. 27. Ds. in te sperantium : S. (I. mccccci.) Collect for the first Sunday after Trinity.

l. 33. Sancti tui nominis : S. (I. mccccii.) Collect for the second Sunday after Trinity.

P. 45. l. 2. Deprecacionem nostram qs. dne. : S. (I. mcccciv.) Collect for the third Sunday after Trinity.

l. 6. Protector in te sperantium : S. (I. mccccvi.) Collect for the fourth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 11. Da nobis Dne. qs. : S. (I. mccccviii.) Collect for the fifth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 15. Ds. q. diligentibus te : S. (I. mccccx.) Collect for the sixth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 20. Ds. virtutum cuius est totum : S. (I. mccccxii.) Collect for the seventh Sunday after Trinity.

l. 25. Ds. cuius providentia : S. (I. mccccxiv.) Collect for the eighth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 30. Largire nobis dne. qs. : S. (I. mccccvi.) Collect for the ninth Sunday after Trinity. An et, not in S., appears at the end of the line.

l. 32. We may note that the word valeamus appears in S and Y. So that in this case it is not Cranmer that has substituted it for mereamur.

l. 34. Pateant aures miae. : S (I. mccccviii.) For the tenth Sunday after Trinity.

P. 46. l. 2. Ds. q. omnipotentiam parcendo : S. (I. mccccxx.) Collect for the eleventh Sunday after Trinity.

l. 7. Ops. semp. Ds. q. abundantia pietatis : S. (I. mccccxxii.) Collect for the twelfth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 12. Ops. et ms. Ds. de cuius munere : S. (I. mccccxxiv.) Collect for the thirteenth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 13. S. Y. Q. have serviatur.

l. 17. Ops. semp. Ds. da nobis fidei : S. (I. mccccxxvi.) Collect for the fourteenth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 18. For et ut valeamus, S. Y. Q. read et ut mereamur.

l. 21. Custodi qs. dne. Ecclesiam : S. (I. mccccxxviii.) Collect for the fifteenth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 26. Ecclesiam tuam domine miseracio : S. (I. mccccxxx.) Collect for the sixteenth Sunday after Trinity. For continua, S. Y. Q. read continuata.

l. 30. Tua nos qs. gratia : S. (I. mccccxxxii.) Collect for the seventeenth Sunday after Trinity. The scribe has left out Domine between nos and quaesumus.

l. 34. Da qs. dne. populo : S. (I. mccccxxxv.) Collect for the eighteenth Sunday after Trinity.

P. 47. l. 2. Dirigat corda nostra : S. (I. mccccxxxxvi.) Collect for the nineteenth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 6. Ops. et ms. Ds. universa : S. (I. mccccxxxviii.) Collect for the twentieth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 11. Largire qs. Dne : S. (I. mccccxl.) Collect for the twenty-first Sunday after Trinity.

l. 16. Familiam tuam qs. dne. continua : S. (I. mccccxlvi.) Collect for the twenty-second Sunday after Trinity.

l. 20. Deus refugium nostrum et virtus : S. (I. mccccxliv.) Collect for the twenty-third Sunday after Trinity.

l. 24. Absolve qs. dne. : S. (I. mccccxlvi.) Collect for the twenty-fourth Sunday after Trinity.

l. 25. The scribe has omitted nostrorum between peccatorum and nuxibus.

l. 28. Excita qs. dne. : S. (I. mccccl.) Collect for the Sunday next before Advent.

l. 30. The scribe has omitted maiora between remedia and percipient.

EPIPHANIA DOMINI.

St. Matthew ii. 1-12. Erasmus. It is the Gospel in the Sarum Missal (ed. F. H. Dickinson, Burntisland, col. 86) and Edward VI's first book.

l. 39. This is Eusebius, Hist. Eccles. IX. vi. (Migne, P.G. xx. 810.) Breviarium Romanum is most likely that of Quignon, which has a lesson in both texts for Lucianus presbyter martyr.

P. 53.

HILARIUS.

l. 2. This lesson is much indebted to that in the first text of Quignon; which, however, does not speak of Hilary's wife and daughter (line 3). Further, there is omitted Quignon's statement that the Emperor favoured Arianism, and sent Hilary into exile (line 11).

l. 19. The borrowing from Quignon stops here, to be resumed on line 39 at Claruit Hilarius.

P. 54. l. 1. Breviarium Romanum: again most likely Quignon's lesson on St. Hilary; not on St. Felix, for neither text of Quignon, nor the old Roman Breviary, has a lesson for Felix of Nola.

l. 3. Paulinus of Nola, Poemata xii. &c. (Migne P.L. lxi. 462.)

Encomenii is obscure. Cardinal Gasquet and Mr. Edmund Bishop read Encomenii; and this is confirmed by Mr. J. A. Herbert.

Of Encomenij I have little but conjecture to offer. First, I would venture to suggest that we should read Ecumenius in place of Encomenius, as nothing is more frequent than the exchange of n and u. Oecumenius was bishop of Tricca in Thessaly in the tenth century. He wrote Greek commentaries on the Acts, Pauline, and Catholic Epistles. (Migne, P.G. cxviii. cxix.) but in them I can find nothing about Paulinus or Felix of Nola. Then, it may be suggested that after Paulinum there should be a full stop: and that the five words after refer to the lesson below on Timothy. This conjecture is supported by finding a reference to Timothy at the end of a translation of Oecumenius' Enarrationes on the Acts, Epistles, and Revelation, published in 1543 at Antwerp. (Enarrationes Vetustissimorum Theologorum . . . ab Oecumenio . . . Iohanne Hentenio interprete, Antverpiæ, Stelsius, 1543, fo. ccliiji., near the end of this edition, and which answers to the last leaf but one of the Paris edition of 1547.) An account of the finding of the relics of St. Timothy in the time of Constantius, the son of Constantine the Great, is given. The date of the manuscript now edited is thought to be from 1543 to 1547; the dates of the publication of this translation of Oecumenius are 1543 or 1547 and nuper translati might be applied by Cranmer when adding a note to what had been written for him before 1547.

TIMOTHEUS.

This lesson, it would seem, is in the main the work of Cranmer himself, piecing together portions of scripture which treat of St. Timothy; the last few lines he most likely borrows from Witzel, fo. lxxxiii.

l. 16. Here once more is a curious combination of Erasmus and the Vulgate. A pueru sacras literas noverit is from Erasmus, (II. Timothy iii. 15.) while what follows, ab infantia sacras literas nosti, is from the Vulgate.

ll. 24-27. Quotation from Erasmus, II. Tim. i. 5.

l. 36. Salutem quam sola fides afferebat must be Cranmer's own, as also lines 39 and 40.

P. 55. l. 6. This passage is nearly the same in Erasmus and the Vulgate, but for brevi, the Vulgate has cito and some other variants.

l. 8. Here is a conflation of the Vulgate and Erasmus beginning at Neminem, and a departure sometimes from both.

l. 13. At Magnificum the quotation from Philippians ii. 19-23 comes to an end.

l. 35. See I. Tim. v. 23.

l. 37. Here the preference for Erasmus comes in with the use of crebras instead of the Vulgate frequentes.

ll. 38-41. Witzel, fo. lxxxiii.

l. 42. See St. Jerome, contra Vigilant. § 5. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 343.) Theodorus Lector, Eccles. Hist. lib. ii. § 61. (Migne, P.G. lxxxvi. 213.) Also note to l. 3 of p. 54.

P. 56.

BABILAS.

The nearest sources for the lesson that I can detect are St. John Chrysostom's Homily in Sanctam Babylam contra Julianum et contra Gentiles, cap. 5. (Migne, P.G. xl ix. 539.) but material not contained in the homily has been worked up into the lesson.

P. 57. l. 22.

CONVERSIO PAULI.

l. 24—p. 58. l. 28. Acts of Apostles ix. 1-22. (Erasmus) the prophetical lesson for this day in the Sarum Missal, and I. of Edward VI.

P. 59. l. 33.

ANANIAS.

This lesson, like those of Titus and Timothy, appears to be a composition based upon the account in the Acts of the relations of Ananias to St. Paul. The use of the version of Erasmus points to Cranmer as the author.

P. 60. l. 21. Per uisum: Erasmus. in uisu: Vulgate.

l. 40. Organum electum: Erasmus. Vas electionis: Vulgate.

P. 61. l. 19.

CHRYSOSTOMUS.

The lesson appears to be based on Socrates, Hist. Eccles. lib. vi. (Migne, P.G. lxvii. 666-735.)

l. 21. Read Secundum.

P. 63. l. 13.

IGNATIUS.

The lesson is taken almost word for word from St. Jerome, de viris illustribus, cap. xvi. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 633.)

P. 64. l. 9. PURIFICATIO BEATAE MARIAE VIRGINIS.

St. Luke ii. 22-39 (Erasmus). The passage is much longer than the gospel for this day in the Sarum Missal or Edward VI.'s first book.

P. 65.

PHILEAS ET PHILOROMUS.

The lesson is from Eusebius, Hist. Eccles. lib. viii. capp. 9 and 10. The version of Rufinus is closely followed.

l. 4. A paragraph of Eusebius omitted after cudem.

l. 7. for armis read ramis.

l. 15. Here Eusebius is left.

l. 19. Eusebius is resumed.

l. 25. Eusebius has seruaretur for eos seruarit.

l. 28. Here the affirmation of Eusebius as an eye-witness has been slightly changed. He says: Videbam fessos residere, &c.

l. 40. Here at O vere mirabilis the tenth chapter begins.

l. 42. Before christi Eusebius has gloria.

l. 44. After Decorabat several lines of Eusebius are left out.

P. 66. l. 2. Eusebius reads Thimnis. The right reading is no doubt Thmuis, as in the text.

l. 31.

BENJAMIN.

This lesson from line 32 to p. 67 line 7 is taken from Historia Tripartita, lib. x. cap. xxx. (Migne, P.L. lxix. 1185.) and from line 7 to the end from cap. xxxiii. (Migne, col. 1186.) of the same. It is almost word for word as in Historia Tripartita.

P. 68. l. 9.

MATTHIAS.

l. 13. Acts i. 15–26, (Vulgate) finishing at l. 35; the prophetical lesson in the Sarum Missal.

l. 35. Hic autem, &c. This final paragraph is almost word for word as in Q¹, not following Q² where it varies from Q¹.

P. 69.

QUADRAGINTA MARTYRES.

The lesson is based upon the homily of St. Basil on the Forty Martyrs. (Migne, P.G. xxxi. 508.) In the Cranmerian Collection there appears an allusion to the Forty Martyrs. (See Appendix to Miscellaneous Writings and Letters of Thomas Cranmer, Parker Society, 1846, p. 483.)

P. 71. l. 20.

AMBROSIUS.

It may be thought that this lesson is based upon the well-known life of St. Ambrose by Paulinus, but some of the more striking events of his life are not told.

P. 72. l. 20. The resistance to Justina is here told; but nothing is said of the famous closing of the church doors against the Emperor. Perhaps, in the days of the Supreme Head, it was safer to omit it. There is a similar omission in the lesson of St. Hilary. (See above, p. 53.)

Note 1. St. Ambrose, de officiis ministrorum lib. ii. cap. 28 is the reference to the celebrated passage justifying the sale of church goods for the sake of the poor. (Migne, P.L. xvi. 139.) It may have been introduced to justify the spoiling of the church goods under Henry VIII.

Note 2. liber confessionum, v. 14. (Migne, P.L. xxxii. 717.)

P. 73.

MARCUS.

Witzel, fo. cxxxviii. would seem to have suggested the greater part of this lesson.

l. 13. II. Tim iv. 11. (Vulgate.)

ll. 23–35. This may be an embroidered and expanded edition of the latter half of cap. viii. of St. Jerome's de viris illustribus, and the earlier half of cap. xi. to which the note "Jero." may be the mutilated reference. (See also Eusebius, Eccles. Hist. ii. 15.) There seems to be no absolute necessity to credit Cranmer with a first hand acquaintance with Philo. An edition of this author does not seem to have appeared before 1552.

P. 74. l. 6. May be taken from St. Jerome, de viris illustribus, cap. viii. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 623.)

l. 9.

PHILIPPUS ET JACOBUS.

l. 10. This is taken from St. Jerome, de viris illustribus, ii. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 609.) almost word for word, with a few omissions.

l. 38. Galat. i. 19.

P. 75. l. 1. Et a me, i.e. St. Jerome.

l. 2. Teubner's edition of St. Jerome reads Adamantius in place of Origenes.

l. 14. Hamam stands distinctly enough in the MS. without any sign of attempted erasure. It would seem that the scribe wrote Hamam for Hadriani; but discovering his error, wrote the right word and omitted to strike out the wrong. There is no Hamam in Teubner's edition, nor any other of St. Jerome that I have consulted.

l. 19.

ANNA UXOR HELCHANE.

P. 76. l. 2. See the Book of Tobit xi. 17.

l. 8. From this point the lesson begins to be based upon I. Samuel i.

P. 77. l. 13. The lesson begins to quote the song of Anna from I. Samuel ii. and also notes the resemblance of Anna's canticle to Magnificat.

l. 33.

GORDIUS.

The note states that the lesson is Ex basilio. There is a homily of St. Basil, Homilia xviii. in Gordium martyrem (Migne, P.G. xxxi. 489.) which Cranmer may have claimed as the inspiration of his lesson through the medium of Witzel, fo. cxlvii. Both the homily of St. Basil and Witzel begin in the same way, but it is not until p. 78 that Cranmer begins to copy St. Basil's homily on Gordius who is quoted in the Appendix to the Miscellaneous Writings and Letters of Thomas Cranmer, Parker Society, 1846. p. 483.

P. 78. l. 1. Fuit hic: here the borrowing from Witzel fo. cxlvii. b. line 25 becomes plain.

l. 43. Note stadium: it is thus in Witzel, fo. cxlviii. b. line 6.

P. 81. l. 38.

BARNABAS.

l. 49. The greater part of the lesson is based on holy scripture, following the example of Q.

P. 82. l. 1. Acts iv. 36.

ll. 35-46. Acts xiv. 8-15.

P. 83. ll. 1-9. Acts xiv. 15-18.

l. 14. From Q.

l. 19.

BASILIUS.

This lesson seems based upon Gregory Nazianzen. Orat. xlivi. in laudem Basili Magni (Migne, P.G. xxxvi. 495.) with the assistance of Witzel, fo. lxvii.

P. 86. l. 7. NATIVITAS JOHANNIS BAPSTE.

The lesson is taken from Luke i. 5-25; 57-66; 80. Erasmus. This lesson combines the gospel for the vigil and the gospel for the feast itself in the Sarum Missal.

P. 87. l. 3. Erasmus and Vulgate have mutus in place of mutus.

l. 8. At Cum autem the lesson passes into verse 57 of the same chapter.

l. 21. For proficerunt Erasmus and Vulgate have posuerunt.

l. 24. For ostendens Erasmus has ostendendus.

l. 32.

PETRUS ET PAULUS.

l. 33. The lesson begins with St. Jerome, de viris illust. i. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 607.) thence passes into the Gospel of St. John.

l. 34. For viro read vico with St. Jerome.

ll. 35-37. St John i. 42, Vulgate.

l. 37 to p. 88. line 2. St. Matthew iv. 18-20, Vulgate.

P. 88. l. 2. Erasmus has illico, but Vulgate continuo.

ll. 2-5. St. Mark i. 29-31, but neither Vulgate nor Erasmus is followed exactly.

ll. 6-19. St. Matthew xiv. 25-33, mainly Erasmus.

ll. 22-38. St. Matthew xvi. 15-23, mainly Erasmus.

P. 89. ll. 1-5. St. Matthew xvii. 4-5, Erasmus.

ll. 7-11. St. Matthew xxvi. 33-36, Erasmus.

ll. 15-18. St. Matthew xxvi. 74-75.

ll. 16-21. Based on St. Jerome, de viris illustribus, i. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 607.)

l. 22.

COMMEMORATIO S. PAULI.

The lesson is based on St. Jerome, except the central part, from l. 38.
ll. 23-37. St. Jerome, de viris illustribus, v. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 615.)

P. 90. l. 13. Credulitatem; no infrequent mistake of the scribe for crudelitatem. (See p. 91. l. 24. p. 92. l. 34.)

l. 18. Here St. Jerome is resumed.

l. 22.

PETRUS DOROTHEUS ET CETERI.

This lesson is taken from Eusebius, Hist. Eccles. lib. viii. cap. ii.

This and the passage read for Phileas and Philoromus (see above p. 65) seem to have been chosen more for the purpose of setting forth torments of the martyrs, than for the commemoration of these particular saints.

l. 31. At Post non multum, ch. iii. of Eusebius begins.

P. 91. l. 8. Here the lesson omits the rest of ch. iii. and passes into ch. iv.

l. 17. Etenim apud is the beginning of ch. v.

l. 18. Eusebius read illusterrimus where the text has inclus.

l. 24. For credulitatis Eusebius has crudelitatis.

l. 30. Post hunc is the beginning of ch. vi.

l. 35. Read immolare for immolarem.

l. 40. Read prunis for primis.

l. 43. Eusebius reads non ad subitum.

P. 92. l. 20. For perdurant read perdurans.

l. 25. For presumptione presumpsit Eusebius has suspitione presumpsit.

l. 26. For inestimabili Eusebius has in extimabili.

l. 34. Here again credulitas is written for crudelitas. Also read partem for patrem.

P. 93. l. 6.

MARIA MAGDALENA.

The lesson is from St. John xx. 1-18, Erasmus.

ll. 7-8. The passage in brackets is not in Erasmus. (See St. Luke viii. 2.)

l. 16. After monumentum et Erasmus has cum se inclinasset, vidit posita linteamina non tamen introivit. Venit ergo Simon Petrus sequens eum et introivit in monumentum, et vidit, and so on.

P. 94.

S. JACOBUS FRATER JOHANNIS.

l. 3. Matth. iv. 21-23. Erasmus.

l. 9. Mark x. 35-40. Erasmus.

l. 14. Read quo.

l. 20. See Witzel, fo. clxxvii. from Eusebius Hist. Eccles. ii. 9.

P. 95. l. 13.

BARTHOLOMEUS.

This lesson may have been put together by Cranmer.

l. 22. The quotation from Eusebius begins at Erant adhuc. (Hist. Eccles. v. 10.) Nempe quibus imperium tenuit Commodus is an interpolation.

l. 32. This line is borrowed from Witzel, fo. cxcv. Cranmer preserves the traditional place of death while saying nothing of the traditional flaying alive.

P. 96.AUGUSTINUS.

This lesson seems based upon the life by Possidius (Migne, P.L. xxxii. 34.); it follows the outlines of this life, but at the same time contains particulars not given by Possidius, and some that are contrary to the generally accepted beliefs.

P. 98. l. 32.CYPRIANUS.

Witzel has borrowed much of his lesson from the life of Cyprian by Pontius. (See Migne, P.L. iii. 1541–1566.)

P. 100. l. 27. Here the quotation from Witzel fo. cciii. begins at Denique comprehensus and continues to the end of the lesson, word for word.

P. 101. l. 36. After praebuisti, Witzel has a line on fo. ciii. b. l. 17 from bottom : et non aequissimis consiliis principum assensum unquam praebuisti sed semper, &c. A careless omission of Cranmer's scribe, in copying, caused by two praebuisti coming together ; or a refusal to allow St. Cyprian to appear as one notwithstanding the commands of Princes.

P. 102. l. 13.MATHEUS APOSTOLUS.

The lesson is from St. Matthew ix. 9–13. Erasmus as far as l. 26, except l. 14, which is from St. Jerome, de viris illustribus iii. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 613.)

l. 31. See Socrates, Hist. Eccles. I. xix. (Migne, P.G. lxvii. 125.)

l. 32. These moral remarks are most likely from the pen of Cranmer himself.

P. 103. l. 8.POLYCARPUS.

ll. 8–19 taken from St. Jerome, de viris illustribus, cap. xvii. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 635.)

l. 12. For Anthono read Antonino Pio.

l. 38. Here the lesson begins to be based upon Eusebius, Historiae Ecclesiasticae, lib. iv. cap. xiv. (Migne, P.G. xx. 338.)

P. 105. l. 26.LUCAS.

The lesson is based, it would appear, upon St. Jerome, de viris illustribus, vii. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 619.) with some borrowings from Witzel, fo. ccxvii. b.

P. 106. l. 3. Sepultus to end is taken from St. Jerome, de viris illustribus, cap. vii. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 619.)

SYMON ET JUDAS.

l. 13. Judas : St. Jerome, de viris illustribus, cap. iv. (Migne, P.L. xxiii. 613.)

OMNES SANCTI DEFUNCTI.

l. 22. Note the change from All Saints into all the faithful departed.

I. Thess. iv. 13–18. Erasmus. This is one of the Epistles in the Sarum Officium Defunctorum (Missale Sarum, ed. F. H. Dickinson, Burntisland, 1861–83, col. 862*.) The same passage was read as the epistle at “the holy communion when there is a burial of the dead” in the first book of Edward VI.

P. 108.

NATALIS DOMINI.

This lesson is from Luke ii. 1-20. Erasmus. This passage forms the gospels for the masses in galli cantu and in aurora of Christmas day at Sarum.

The gospel for the first communion of I. of Edward VI. proceeds only to : men a good wyle.

l. 19. Erasmus for this line has : et excubantes excubias nocte saper gregem suum. Et ecce Angelus Domini.

P. 109.

STEPHANUS.

l. 1. This lesson is from Acts vi. 8-vii. 2. Erasmus.

l. 18. The verbal following here is given up, and only an abstract appears.

l. 30. Acts resumes vii. at 51-60, ending on line 3 of p. 110.

P. 110.

JOHANNES EVANGELISTA.

A great deal of the lesson is based upon Scripture.

ll. 5-8 from St. Jerome, de viris illust. ix. (Migne, P.L. xxxiii. 623.)

ll. 28-30. St. Jerome begins again.

P. 111. l. 22. Witzel begins again from fo. lvii. and continues with interpolations to end of the lesson.

l. 24. Tertullian (Liber de prescriptionibus adv. Haeret. cap. xxxvi. in Migne, P.L. ii. 49.) speaks of the boiling oil and exile in Patmos.

INNOCENTES.

l. 38. Matt. ii. 13-19. Erasmus.

NOTES TO THE SECOND PART.

P. 115. l. 4. Pater noster is almost universally said before the canonical hours. Probably Cranmer had Q¹ before him. In Q² Ave Maria is added. But Cranmer has not inserted Confiteor here as Quignon does in both texts. A form of confession and absolution appeared in this place in the Second book of Edward.

It may be noticed that Cranmer begins the Hours with Mattins as Q. does, not with the first Vespers as in most breviaries; but at the same time, the Psalter, the backbone of the office, begins in the Roman Breviary at Mattins.

l. 6. Domine labia, etc. common to most service books.

l. 10. Alleluia replaced by Laus tibi in Septuagesima, as everywhere, and above on p. 20, l. 32.

l. 11. Invitat. Christum Dominum: not S. or Roman, Q. In note 2 Cranmer forbids the saying of the invitatory more than twice. Apparently it was to be treated like the ordinary anthem to a psalm. This direction Cranmer has borrowed from Q.

l. 14. Hymnus Verbum Supernum: S. hymn for Mattins in Advent. It is Vox clara in Q. a Lauds hymn in many breviaries.

l. 15. Psalmi ex ordine: What was this ordo? It seems at present unknown; with a certain amount of plausibility it may be thought to be the distribution in Q.

l. 17. Ant. Nox praecessit: S. ant. to first ps. in third nocturn of Advent Sunday.

l. 20. On Sundays and holidays there are to be four lessons at Mattins, the fourth not being given in the course, but here in the series. The fourth lesson for this Sunday is Daniel ix. 24-27. Vulgate.

l. 22. These four benedictions are in the Sarum Breviary, fasc. I, leaf B, after Calendar. They do not all appear in Q¹ (pp. xxii. and 22.) or Q² (p. 35.)

l. 24. This benediction is one that is common to Q. and S. It would seem that the scribe had begun to copy S. by writing illuminet corda; but then changed his mind and determined to follow Q. and wrote illuminet sensus et corda. But the striking out of the first corda may be due to a mere mistake which the scribe corrected as soon as made.

l. 27. Note that there are to be lessons at Lauds and Vespers as well as at Mattins. These are enlargements of the mere remnants of scripture that are found in the little chapters of the day hours.

l. 30. Propter magnam misericordiam tuam: not in S. or Q. Deo gratias is the answer in Q. and the Old Roman Breviary. Cranmer has made the first verse of the Miserere into a versicle and respond.

P. 116. l. 1. This rubric is adapted from Q. Te Deum was not to be sung in Advent and Lent and a substitute was provided in Miserere.

Cranmer here follows Q. See below, note on l. 5. p. 124.

l. 11. Ant. Gaudete: S. (I. xxvi.) third nocturn of Advent, shortened.

l. 16. Collect: S. (I. vii.) Q. and many others have te mereamur protegente eripi: te liberante salvare. The change into eripiamur is made to avoid the use of mereamur. See above, Introduction, p. lxii.

l. 20. Here the lesson from the sapiential books, called capitulum, is inserted before Benedictus, although the anthem said before the first psalm has not been repeated.

l. 20. These preces are the same as the suffrages for Mattins and Evensong in the First Book of King Edward VI., except that another Versicle and Respond have been added in the Edwardian Book. Most of them seem borrowed from the preces of the Sarum Lauds and Prime. (S. ii. 53, 89.)

It must be owned that the structure of Lauds has been much broken up, even that of Q. not having been preserved. The attempt to preserve the anthem is peculiarly unfortunate. Q² retained it after Benedictus; but then he did not interpolate a lesson between the psalms of Lauds and Benedictus.

P. 117. l. 2. Domine sancte Pater: This is the usual collect at Prime, but Cranmer has made it into a collect at the end of the suffrages after Lauds, the collect of the day having been already said (p. 116, l. 15.).

l. 3. For serva S. Q., etc., have salva. But the text of the collect in Q. differs from that in S. (II. 54.) after the first few lines.

l. 6. For moderacione S. has moderamine.

l. 11. Iam lucis: S. (II. 37.) Q. hymn at Prime.

l. 13. In England Quicunque vult was commonly said daily at Prime. The restriction to Sundays and holidays seems to be a following of Q. which limits the recitation to Sundays, and directs that on week days the Apostles' Creed is to be said in its place. Cranmer's rubric is almost verbally as Q.'s.

l. 15. Te iure laudant, te adorant: anthem S. (II. 49.) on Sundays and simples.

l. 18. Note the collect of the day said at Prime instead of the usual collect for Prime.

l. 20. What was the historia de festo that was to be read in place of the martyrology?

l. 23. Preciosa is the usual versicle after the martyrology.

l. 26. Sancta Maria: S. (II. 54.) at prime. S. adds dei after domini. It runs thus: Mater Domini dei nostri. The text in Q² is somewhat different; but both in S. and Q. the prayer is not quite a direct invocation of the saints.

l. 27. Before orent S. has intercedant et.

l. 28. After nos S. has mereamur; Cranmer hardly ever suffers a derivative of mereor to stand; so it is struck out, and adiuvari and salvari have to be put into the subjunctive.

l. 35. Nunc sancte nobis: S. (II. 57.) Q. and many others, hymn at Terce.

P. 118. l. i. Laus et: S. (II. 60.) Ant. on Sundays at Terce.

l. 6. Rector potens: S. Q. and many others, hymn at Sext.

l. 7. Ostende nobis: not an anthem in S. (ii. 66.), but a respond and versicle at Sext. It appears, however, as an Advent anthem in the ancient antiphonary edited by the Benedictines of Solesmes (Antiphonarium Ambrosianum, p. 5, in Paléographie Musicale, Solesmes, 1900, t. vi.).

l. 11. Rerum Deus: S. (II. 65.) Q. and many others, hymn at None.

l. 12. Alter alterius: not an anthem in S. but the little chapter at None. (II. 68.) It is not uncommon to find an anthem in one liturgy serving as a respond in another: and so on. See note on l. 28 below.

l. 18. Adesto: this collect may be found in the Sarum Missal (col. 815*) in mass pro iter agentibus. The collect of the day is made to give way at this Hour to a collect of which it is not easy to see that it is very suitable to None.

l. 20. Note that proteguntur is changed into protegamur.
 l. 25. Conditor alme : S. (I. vi.) Q. and many others, Advent hymn at Vespers.

l. 28. Sobrie : anthem in S. (I. cix.) at Lauds of the Third Sunday in Advent, Sobrie et being prefixed from Titus ii. 12. It also forms part of the little chapter at Lauds and Terce on Christmas Day in S. (I. clxxxix. and xciii.).

P. 119. l. 3. This is on the lines of S. and Q. Complin, not of Roman.

l. 7. Salvator mundi : S. (II. 226.) hymn at complin from Christmas Eve to Octave of Epiphany, and all doubles to first Sunday in Lent. (Not Q.)

l. 10. Salva nos : S. (II. 228.) Q².

l. 11. cum Christo : S. Q².

l. 15. Illumina : S. (II. 240.) not Q.

l. 28. Here the influence of Q² is felt in the direction to say the psalms of the hour with Benedictus, Magnificat, etc. without interval. The rubric is struck out perhaps because the direction as to Lauds is inconsistent with that afterwards inserted above, p. 116, l. 9.

DOMINICA II. ADVENTUS.

l. 36. Excita : S. (I. lxxxi.) Q. and many others, collect for second Sunday in Advent.

l. 38 : For valeamus S. and Q. have mereamur. As usual Cranmer has waged his war against the use of the word mereamur. Yet nowhere does it seem to be more clear that the word is equivalent to valeamus or bossimus. He hesitated also between servire valeamus and serviamus.

P. 120. DOMINICA III. ADVENTUS.

l. 5. Aurem tuam : S. (I. xcix.) Q. collect for third Sunday in Advent.

DOMINICA IV. ADVENTUS.

l. 12. Excita : S. (I. cxxxiii.) Q. collect for fourth Sunday in Advent.

IN NATALI DOMINI.

l. 17. Veni Redemptor : S. (I. clxvi.) hymn for first Vespers of Christmas. Not in Q.

l. 18. Implete sunt : Anthem at psalms of first Vespers of Christmas, in S. and Q. They both have Completi sunt dies. Vulgate has Impleti sunt.

l. 21. Concede quesumus : S. (I. cxc.) Q. Collect for Christmas.

l. 28. Invitatorium. Christum verum deum : not in S. or Q.

l. 30. Christe Redemptor omnium : S. (I. clxxi.) hymn for Mattins on Christmas Day. Q. assigns it to Vespers.

l. 31. Dominus dixit ad me : Q² S. (I. clxxii.) first anthem at first nocturn of Christmas Day.

l. 33. Populus qui ambulabat : S. (I. clxxiii.) first lesson, omitting first verse, and last. Cf. first lesson of Q².

l. 35. In principio : suggested by the opening verses of the ninth lesson of Mattins in S. (I. clxxxiv.) or by the gospel at the third mass of Christmas Day, but ending four verses beyond.

l. 38. Factum est autem : suggested by the third lesson of Q¹ and the second lesson of Q².

l. 40. Liber generationis : a portion of the first chapter of the Gospel of St. Matthew was sung with much ceremony at S. (I. clxxxvi.) after the final respond at Mattins. The lesson in the text takes, however, the whole of the first chapter.

P. 121. l. 2. Facta est: S. (I. clxxxix.) Anthem, fourth at Lauds on Christmas Day.

l. 8. A solis ortus: S. (I. clxxxix.) hymn at Lauds.

l. 9. O admirabile: S. (Circumcision, Lauds I. ccxcii. and Purification, first vespers, III. 131.) Q² p. 239, Mattins of Circumcision. One of the finest anthems in the Breviary.

l. 13. Apparuit: the beginning is of the epistle of the first mass of Christmas Day, but by some error it passes into the epistle of the second mass, and even three verses beyond its end. As it stands, the lesson begins at Titus ii. 11, and ends at Titus iii. 9.

IN FESTO DIVI STEPHANI.

ll. 15–25. These lessons are from the sixth and seventh chapter of the Acts; but they do not appear in either Q. or S.

IN FESTO DIVI JOANNIS EVANGELISTE.

ll. 28–33. These lessons do not appear in S. or Q.

l. 36. Ecce angelus: the lesson in both texts of Q.

P. 122. CIRCUMCISIO DOMINI.

ll. 3–9. These lessons are not in S. or Q.

l. 10. Et postquam: Q. third lesson in both texts.

l. 12. Videte ne quis: lesson not in S. or Q.

EPIPHANIA DOMINI.

l. 16. Hostis Herodes: Q. S. (I. cccxix.) hymn at Vespers on the Epiphany.

l. 17. Surge illuminare: S. (I. cccxxi.) third lesson. It passed into the first lesson at Mattins of I. of Edward VI.

l. 20. A Patre unigenitus: S. (I. cccxxix.) hymn at Lauds on the Epiphany.

l. 21. Cum natus: Q² second lesson; Q¹ third lesson.

l. 23. In diebus illis: the whole of Matt. iii. S. has the parallel portion from Luke iii. at end of Mattins.

l. 26. Et die tertia: Iohn ii. 1–12; part of this chapter passed into I. of Edward VI. as the second lesson at Evensong, but it began at v. 12. In 1662 the lesson was made to begin at v. 1 and end at v. 12 as in text.

l. 29. Et nunc hec: Isaiah xl ix. 5–13; this lesson passed into the I. of Edward VI. as the first lesson at Evensong, but from the beginning to the end of the chapter.

l. 32. Deus qui hodierna: S. Q. and many others as collect for Epiphany.

DOMINICA I. POST OCTAVAS EPIPHANIE.

l. 37. Dominum qui fecit nos: S. (II. 149.) Invitatory for Friday.

l. 38. Aeterne rerum conditor: S. (II. 34.) hymn for Lauds on the Sundays from Epiphany to Lent, and through the Trinity season.

P. 123. l. 1. Servite: S. (I. 10.) Anthem at first nocturn from First Sunday after Epiphany to Passion Sunday.

l. 3. Spiritus omnis: S. (II. 29.) Anthem at last psalms at Lauds on the first Sunday after the octave of Epiphany.

l. 7. Vota qs.: Q² (p. 63). S. (I. cccciv.) collect for first Sunday after the octave of the Epiphany.

l. 11. Deus creator: S. (I. cccciii.) hymn at first Vespers of first Sunday after the octave of the Epiphany.

l. 12. Sciamus omnes: S. (I. ccccxiv.) second anthem at Lauds on first Sunday after the octave of the Epiphany.

l. 19. Ops. semp. Ds. q. celestia: S. (I. ccccxv.) collect for the second Sunday after the octave of Epiphany.

l. 24. Ops. semp. Ds. infirmitatem: Q² (p. 69). S. (I. ccccxlili.) collect for the third Sunday after the octaves of the Epiphany.

l. 28. Ds. q. nos in tantis: Q² (p. 72). S. (I. cccclv.) collect for the fourth Sunday after the octaves of the Epiphany.

l. 33. Familian tuam: Q² (p. 74). S. (I. cccclxiv.) collect for the fifth Sunday after the octaves of the Epiphany.

P. 124.

DOMINICA IN SEPTUAGESIMA.

l. 4. Compare l. 9 of p. 115 above, and l. 32 of p. 20.

l. 5. Miserere in place of Te Deum would seem to be a following of Q. though it should be noted that already in the fifteenth century such was the practice at Syon. (G. J. Aungier, History and Antiquities of Syon Monastery, Nichols, 1840, p. 325.) In Bishop Hilsey's Primer of 1539, the fifty-first psalm was also said in place of Te Deum between Septuagesima and Easter. (Edward Burton, Three Primers, Oxford University Press, 1834, p. 337.)

l. 7. Preces populi: Q. S. (I. cccclxxxiv.) collect for Septuagesima.

DOMINICA IN SEXAGESIMA.

l. 12. Ops. semp. Ds. dirige actus: S. (I. cclxiv.) collect for sixth day after Christmas. Is this collect substituted for that of Sexagesima to avoid the mention of St. Paul?

l. 13. For valeamus S. has mereamur.

DOMINICA IN QUINQUAGESIMA.

l. 17. Preces nras. qs. dne. clementer exaudi: Q. S. (I. dxli.) Collect for Quinquagesima.

l. 18. nostrorum: om. S. Q., but in the Roman Missal of 1474, and apparently in all editions collated by Dr. Lippe (see H.B.S. edition) and one edition of the Sarum Missal (1494), nostrorum remains. Thus Cranmer may have had some text before him other than S. and Q.

IN DIE CINERUM.

l. 21. Hodie si vocem eius: Q. has this invitatory for Ash Wednesday. In S. (I. dxxvi.) it is for Passion Sunday. Both S. and Q. have Domini where the text has eius. Is this again a literal following of the Vulgate by Cranmer?

There are no proper psalms. It will be noticed that there are proper lessons for Mattins, but the lessons for Lauds and Vespers are in the Table of lessons following the usual course (see above, p. 146).

l. 23. Audi benigne: Q. hymn at Mattins of Ash Wednesday. S. (I. dlxxxii.) hymn at Lauds of first Sunday in Lent. Cranmer thus follows Q. and not tradition in beginning Lenten hymns on Ash Wednesday.

l. 24. Convertimini: Q² anthem for psalms at Mattins on Ash Wednesday, followed verbally; the text of the capitulum of S. (I. dlvi.) on Ash Wednesday is somewhat different.

l. 26. Clama ne cesses: Isaiah lviii. 1-10. Not from Q. or S.

l. 28. Factum est: Jonah iii. 1-10. Not from S. or Q.

l. 30. Magnus enim: Joel ii. 11-17. Suggested by first lesson of Q² on Ash Wednesday.

l. 33. Derelinquat impius: Q² anthem for psalms at Vespers on Ash Wednesday.

P. 125. l. 2. Exaudi qs. dñe.: Q. (at end of Litany). S. (I. dlvii.)
Memoria pro penitentibus.

l. 5. Ex more: Q² hymn at Mattins of Ash Wednesday. S. (I. dlxxi.)
 Hymn at first Vespers of first Sunday in Lent.

l. 6. Lavamini: S. (I. dclxx.) little chapter at Terce, on the Monday in the third week of Lent, omitting last nine words.

l. 10. Christe q. lux es: S. (II. 228.) Compline hymn for Lent, up to Passion Sunday.

l. 16. Inchoata jejunia: Q. S. (I. dlxi.) collect for Friday after Ash Wednesday. Here is another break with tradition in the distribution of the collects.

l. 18. valeamus: I do not find that this has ever been mereamur.

l. 21. Ds. q. conspicis: Q. S. (I. dcxxiii.) collect for second Sunday in Lent.

l. 27. Ds. innocentie restitutor: S. (I. dcxl.) collect for Vespers on Wednesday after second Sunday in Lent. Not in Q.

l. 33. Concede qs. ops. ds. ut q. ex merito: Q. S. (I. dclxxxvi.) collect for fourth Sunday in Lent.

P. 126.

DOMINICA IN PASSIONE.

l. 2. Vexilla Regis: S. or Q. See line 22 for the stanzas in use.
 Cranmer's direction for complin is obscure.

l. 5. Christum Dei filium: Q. Invitatory for Passion Sunday. Q¹ has qui, but Q² quia, as in text.

l. 7. Pange lingua: Q. for Mattins of Passion Sunday. Q. is the most likely source of the hymn, as Q. has the stanza beginning Vagit infans, which S. has not.

l. 10. Popule meus: Q² S. anthem for the psalms on Passion Sunday.

There is a break here up to Easter in the ferial lessons for Mattins and Vespers, but not for Lauds. (See above, p. 147.)

ll. 12-17. These three lessons are part of the Passion generally sung on Palm Sunday, but they seem to have been suggested by Q. See Matthew xxvi. 1-46.

l. 19. Circumdederunt: Q² anthem for Lauds on Passion Sunday.

l. 22. Vexilla regis: Only five stanzas of this hymn are given. Q. has seven, and S. eight. There was most likely a theological reason for omitting the stanzas Arbor decora, Beata cuius, and O crux ave. But these, again, are in Part I. p. 35.

l. 24. Foderunt manus: Q² anthem to psalms at Mattins on Tuesday in Holy Week.

l. 26. Lesson is a continuation of those on ll. 12-17. See Matthew xxvi. 47-58.

l. 29. Ops. semp. Ds. q. humano: this is the collect universal for Palm Sunday, but now moved to Passion Sunday.

l. 33. The dislike of mereamur shows itself again. Valeamus is substituted for what appears to be received in every known text.

l. 35. Cultor dei: S. (II. 230) hymn at complin from Passion Sunday to Maundy Thursday.

l. 36. Media vita: S. (II. dcliii.) anthem for Nunc dimittis on third Sunday in Lent.

P. 127. l. 2. Parce peccatis nostris: Not in S. which substitutes amarae morti ne tradas nos.

ll. 5-39. These lessons are all taken from the Passion according to Matthew and Mark, following the example of Q. at this season.

P. 128. l. 1. Mark xv. 33-47.

- l. 3. Luke xxii. 1-13.
- l. 7. Luke xxii. 14-23.
- l. 9. Luke xxii. 24-38.
- l. 11. Luke xxii. 39-53.
- l. 13. Luke xxii. 54-71.

l. 17. This being the Saturday before Palm Sunday, the lessons change to the Gospel of St. John, and are carried on to the end of the Passion, chapter by chapter.

- l. 23. John xii. 1-19.

l. 25. Respice qs. dne. S. (see p. 130). According to tradition this collect was said only on the three last days of Holy Week.

DOMINICA PALMARUM.

l. 33. This portion describes the action of the day: Matthew xxi. 1-17.

IN CENA DOMINI.

P. 129. l. 31. The psalms have the Vulgate numbering. They are the same as in S. (I. dcclxxiv.) at the first nocturn of Maundy Thursday. They are not those of Q. nor are the other psalms for Good Friday or Easter Even.

l. 35. Zelus domus tue: Q² S. anthem to psalms at Mattins on Maundy Thursday.

P. 130. l. 1. Lesson suggested by Q. and S., but the whole of Chap. i. of Lamentations is read.

- l. 3. Lesson is from Exodus xii. 1-17.

l. 5. For Hebreos read I. Corinth. xi. 20-32. which is a following of Q².

- l. 10. Traditor autem: Q² anthem to psalms at Lauds.

l. 12. Kyrie, and what follows as far as Vespers, is taken partly from S. and partly from Q².

- l. 25. Respice qs. Dne.: Q. S.

l. 29. Cenantibus autem eis: Q² anthem to psalms at Vespers of Maundy Thursday. In S. anthem to Magnificat.

- l. 35. Christus factus: Q² anthem for psalms at Complin.

IN DIE PARASCEVES.

l. 41. Diviserunt: anthem for psalms at Lauds of Good Friday Q², and of first psalm of first nocturn of S. The psalms are those of the first nocturn in S.

Cranmer saw how unsuitable it would be to follow the ordinary Friday distribution of the Psalter, as in Q.

P. 131. l. 1. Genesis xxii. 1-18. This is not suggested by Q. or S. It passed, however, into I. of Edward VI. as the first lesson at Mattins on Good Friday.

l. 3. This also has passed into I. of Edward VI. as first lesson for Evensong on Good Friday.

- l. 5. This lesson appears to have no history.

l. 8. Proprio filio: S. (I. dccxcii.) first anthem at Lauds for Good Friday.

- l. 12. Dederunt: Q² anthem at Vespers on Good Friday.

- l. 14. This lesson appears to be Cranmer's own choice.

IN VIGILIA PASCHAE.

l. 19. Ps. 15 is in first, 75 and 87 in third, nocturn of Easter Even. in S.

l. 21. Posuerunt: Q² anthem at psalms of Mattins of Easter Even.

ll. 23-29. These lessons seem particular to this scheme.

l. 31. O mors ero: Q² anthem for psalms of the Mattins of Easter Even. S. (I. dccc.) first anthem at Lauds.

l. 34. The first Vespers of Easter show a wide divergence from tradition and they are not the same as in Q². In the Sarum Rite, Vespers consisting only of one psalm and Magnificat is interpolated into the mass before the postcommon, which forms the collect of Vespers.

l. 35. Vespere autem: Q² anthem at Vespers. S. anthem for Magnificat. Illucescit is most likely a scribal error.

l. 39. This is the gospel for Easter Even in the Sarum Missal, continued to the end of the chapter.

P. 132. l. 1. Ds. q. pro nobis: S. (I. deccviii.) collect at the office of the Sepulchre. S. and Q. had the postcommon of Easter Even at this place, which was not suitable when a true Vespers was substituted for the unusual office of the mediæval service.

l. 6. Salva nos: Q² S. (II. 228.) ferial anthem at Compline for whole office in Q². Nunc dimittis in S.

l. 9. Christus hodie: S. (I. dcccix.) Invitatory for Easter Day. Not in Q.

l. 11. Aurora lucis: Q. Mattins of Easter Day. S. (I. dcccvi.) hymn at Mattins on Low Sunday. In the older Breviaries hymns were not sung during the octave of Easter; but at Milan, and the Charterhouse, by the Cistercians, and monks generally, metrical hymns were sung.

l. 12. Angelus autem: S. (I. dcccxiv.) first anthem at Lauds on Easter Day.

l. 14. This selection seems quite appropriate.

l. 16. This lesson is borrowed from Q².

l. 18. This lesson is from Q.

l. 22. Et valde: S. (I. dcccix.) anthem to Benedictus of Easter Day.

l. 25. Ds. q. hodierna: S. (I. dcccix.) collect for Easter Day.

l. 30. Hec dies: S. (I. dcccvi.) Q. as a kind of refrain on Easter Day.

l. 32. Ad cenam: Q. Vespers of Easter Day. S. (I. dcccix.) hymn at second Vespers of Low Sunday.

l. 33. Si consurrexitis: Unknown to S. and Q.

There are no lessons for the Vespers of these three days in the Course. (See above, p. 147.)

P. 133. ll. 2-14. These lessons seem to be suggested by those in Q² for the Easter Week.

DOMINICA PRIMA POST PASCHA.

l. 21. Si consurrexitis: Source not found in Q² or S.

l. 27. Concede qs. ops. ds. ut q. resurrectionis: S. (I. dcccix.) collect at Vespers on Easter Day. Q¹ has a collect for Saturday in Easter Week, and Q² a collect for Low Sunday, beginning in the same way, but with a different ending.

l. 31. Surrexit dns.: Q. invitatory for paschal season. S. (I. dcccvi.) invitatory for Low Sunday.

DOMINICAE POST PASCHA.

All the collects on this page appear to have a common source.

P. 134. l. 2. Ds. q. in filii tui: Q. S. (I. dcccxi.) collect for the second Sunday after Easter.

l. 7. Ds. q. errantibus: Q. S. (I. dccccx.) collect for the third Sunday after Easter.

l. 13. Ds. q. fidelium: Q. S. (I. dccccxxiii.) collect for the fourth Sunday after Easter.

l. 18. Ds. a quo bona: Q. S. (I. dccccxlv.) collect for the fifth Sunday after Easter.

ASCENSIO DOMINI.

l. 23. Jesu nostra redemptio: Q. hymn for Vespers at Ascension. S. (II. 235.) hymn at xv. Compline of Ascension.

l. 24. Ascendens Christus: Q² anthem at Vespers.

l. 26. Concede qs. ops. Ds. ut qui: Q. collect at Vespers. S. at Lauds.

l. 31. Christum Dominum: S. Q. Invitatory for Holy Thursday.

l. 33. Eterne Rex: S. Q. at Mattins of Holy Thursday.

l. 34. Ascendit Ds. in iubilo: Q² anthem for psalms on Holy Thursday.

P. 135. l. 1. This lesson is suggested by the first in Q² on this day.

l. 3. This lesson is the prophetical lesson for the day in the Sarum Missal.

l. 5. This is the third lesson in Q¹ for Ascension Day.

l. 7. Nisi ego abiero: Not in S. or Q. Cf. Y. (third anthem at first Vespers, but the end differs).

l. 11. O Rex glorie: S. Q² anthem at second Vespers.

DOMINICA PENTECOSTES.

l. 20. Iam Christus astra: Q. hymn at Mattins. S. (I. mi.) hymn at first Vespers.

l. 21. Veni sancte spiritus: S. anthem to psalms at first Vespers of Whitsunday.

l. 23. Ds. q. corda: Q. S. (I. mviii.) collect at Lauds.

l. 25. Sancta is not in Q. or S. Most likely it is an addition of Cranmer's. It has passed into I. of Edward VI.

l. 30. Spiritus domini: Q. S. (I. miii.) Invitatory for Pentecost.

l. 31. Eum is not in Q. or S., but its addition makes the sentence clearer.

l. 32. Impleta gaudent viscera: S. (I. mvii.) hymn at Lauds.

l. 34. Emitte spiritum: S. (I. miii.) third anthem at Mattins for Whitsunday.

l. 35. This lesson is a following of Q² first lesson.

l. 37. This again is the prophetical lesson in the Sarum Missal for Whitsunday.

l. 39. This is the same as the third lesson of Q¹ for Whitsunday.

P. 136. l. 1. Accipite spiritum: Q² anthem at Lauds: S. (I. mviii.) anthem at Benedictus.

l. 4. See the rubric to this effect in S. (I. mviii.)

l. 6. Hodie completi: Q² anthem at second Vespers. S. (I. mxi.) at Magnificat.

IN FESTO TRINITATIS.

l. 25. Adesto sancta: Q. hymn at first Vespers. S. (I. mxlvii.) at first Vespers.

l. 26. Tres sunt: Q² anthem for psalms at Lauds.

l. 29. Ops. semp. Ds.: Q. S. collect for Trinity Sunday.

l. 32. in is an addition of Cranmer's. ut eiusdem is the reading of S. Q. and others.

l. 34. This lesson passed into I. of Edward VI. as the second lesson for Mattins on Trinity Sunday.

P. 137. l. 2. Deum verum: S. (I. mxlvii.) Invitatory on Trinity Sunday.

- l. 4. O pater sancte: S. (I. mliv.) hymn at Lauds.
- l. 5. Te invocamus: S. (I. mxlix.) anthem to first psalm of second nocturn.
- l. 8. This lesson passed into I. of Edward VI. as first lesson at Mattins.
- l. 10. This lesson appears to be borrowed from Q²'s first lesson. It does not appear to have become the first lesson at Mattins in the Prayer Book until the changes in the lectionary about 1870.
- l. 15. Te deum patrem: Q² anthem at psalms of second Vespers. S. (I. mlvii.) at Magnificat at second Vespers.
- l. 21. Spes nostra: S. (I. mlx.) anthem to first psalm in second nocturn of Trinity Sunday.
- l. 26. Laudemus Iesum: S. (I. mclxxiii.) Invitatory for first Sunday of Deus omnium.
- l. 28. Primo dierum: S. (I. ccccvi.) hymn at Mattins for first Sunday after the octaves of the Epiphany, Dne. ne in ira.
- l. 29. Adaperiat dns. cor: S. (I. mcccxxxv.) anthem to Magnificat at first Vespers of Dominica prima post V. Kalendas Octobris, Adaperiat, or Invitatory to Mattins.
- l. 32. Omnis creatura: S. (II. 28.) anthem to Benedicite on Sundays.
- l. 34. Adesto supplicationibus: S. (I. dcxxxvii.) collect at Vespers on the Monday after second Sunday in Lent. This collect seems to have been added to supply a collect for the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday before Corpus Christi.
- l. 35. Venie is unusual: S. has pietatis. Venie appears to have no authority from other books; all that I have examined have pietatis.
- l. 38. Lucis creator: S. (II. 195.) hymn on Sunday at Vespers, ferial.

P. 138. l. 1. Vespertina oratio: Q² (p. 174.) anthem for ferial Vesper psalms.

IN FESTO CORPORIS CHRISTI.

l. 7. Pange lingua: Q. hymn at Vespers. S. (I. mlxiv.) hymn for Mattins at Corpus Christi. The stanzas are as in Q. and S.

l. 8. Sempiterne: a scribal error for Supreme.

l. 9. Panis quem ego: S. (I. mlvii.) Part of the Respond to Lectio iv. of second nocturn turned into an anthem.

l. 11. This lesson is the first lesson at Mattins in Q².

l. 14. Ds. q. nobis: the general collect for Corpus Christi.

l. 19. Christum salvatorem: "This invitatory, worthy of the feast, appears to be original." (Mr. Edmund Bishop, p. 351.)

Cardinal Gasquet, whose hand I am inclined to see at p. 28 of Edward VI. and the Book of Common Prayer, speaks of this Invitatory as one in which "the Catholic doctrine of the Blessed Sacrament as maintained by Henry is unmistakably expressed." I must confess that the Invitatory seems to me to come far short of the doctrine of Transubstantiation which I have little doubt Cardinal Gasquet would demand if "the Catholic doctrine" were to be expressed. I fear the Invitatory affords little or no guide to the stage of opinion in which Cranmer found himself when he wrote the office.

l. 21. Sacris solemnisi: Q. hymn for Mattins. S. (I. mlxii.) first Vespers.

l. 22. Ego sum panis: Q² anthem for psalms at Lauds. S. (I. mlxxiii.) anthem at Benedictus.

l. 31. O sacrum convivium: Q² anthem to psalms at Vespers. S. (I. mlxxiv.) anthem to Magnificat, at second Vespers.

l. 35. Qui manducat: S. (I. mlxx.) Respond to seventh lesson of Third Nocturn.

P. 139. DOMINICAE POST TRINITATEM.

l. 1. It may be remarked that Cranmer here uses the expression to be found in the Sarum books: post festum Trinitatis. Later on, on p. 149, he uses the expression post pentecosten, which is probably borrowed from Q. with others like Dominicae post adventum and Dominicae vagantes.

These collects have been compared with those in the Sarum Missal, rather than with those of the Breviary, or of Q.

l. 3. Deus in te sperantium: S. (First Sunday after Trinity.)

l. 9. Sancti tui: S.

l. 15. Deprecacionem nostram: S.

l. 20. Protector in te: S.

l. 26. Da nobis qs. dne.: S.

l. 31. Ds. qui diligentibus: S.

P. 140. l. 3. Deus virtutum: S.

l. 9. Ds. cuius providentia: S.

l. 14. Largire nobis: S.

l. 20. Pateant aures mie.: S.

l. 25. Ds. q. omnipotentiam: S.

l. 31. Ops. semp. Ds. q. abundantia: S.

P. 141. l. 3. Ops. et ms. Ds. de cuius: S.

l. 9. Ops. semp. Ds. da nobis fidei: S.

l. 10. possimus: this is a change as usual from mereamur.

l. 14. Custodi qs. Dne. clementiam: S.

l. 20. Ecclesiam tuam: S.

l. 25. Tua nos qs. gratia: S.

l. 30. Da qs. Dne. populo: S.

l. 34. Dirigat corda nostra: S.

P. 142. l. 3. Ops. et ms. Ds. universa: S.

l. 8. Largire qs. Dne. fidelibus: S.

l. 13. Familiam tuam qs. Dne.: S.

l. 18. Ds. refugium nostrum: S.

l. 23. Absolve qs. Dne.: S.

l. 28. Excita qs. Dne. tuorum: S.

JANUARIUS.

P. 154. 4. Ioan. et hoc est testimonium. These are the first words of verse 19 of Chapter I. of St. John's Gospel, on arriving at which the reader was to stop.

7. Post hec descendit: the first words of verse 12 of the same.

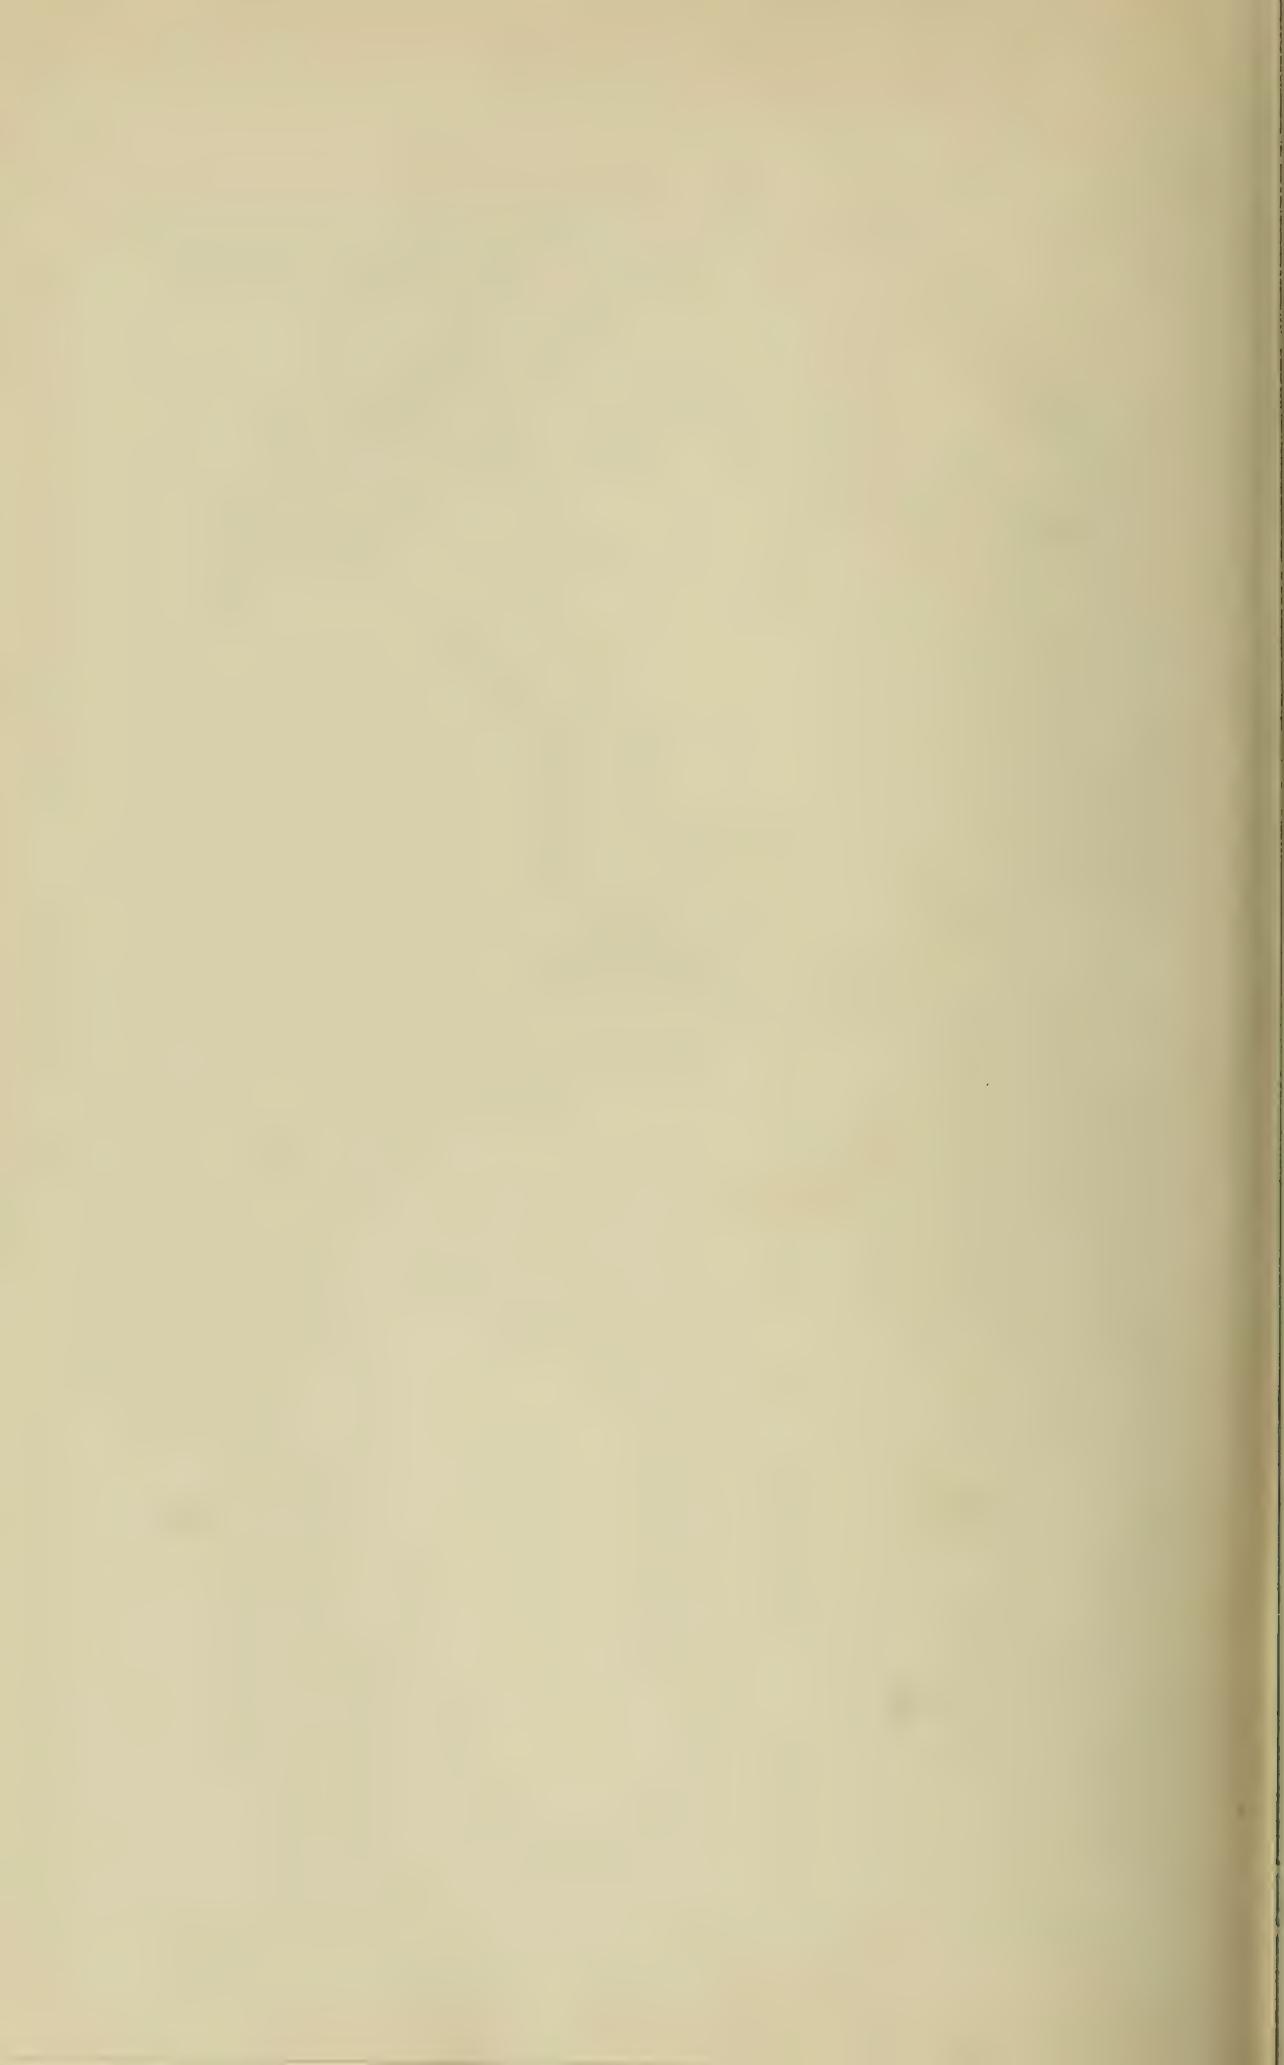

P. 165.

DECEMBER.

28. Here the scribe seems to have discovered that proper lessons are appointed on pp. 120 and 121 for these three feasts, and struck out the numbers for the second lessons.

28. Puer autem crescebat: the first words of verse 40 of Luke II. at which the reader was to stop.
